A CASE IN POINT.

Why the Postmaster Leaned Toward the Sheriff.

There is a town in northern New Hampshire where the families have intermarried to such an extent that it is difficult for an outsider to make the least criticism on one person without the danger of offending some of his family connections. When an unfortunate visitor commented on this fact to Mr. Corbin, the postmaster, Mr. Corbin nodded violently.

"Bill Harmon, that's our sheriff, complained of that no longer ago than last week," said he.

"You see, it took him more'n a fortnight to arrest Nate Giddings because Nate got wind that he was wanted on a little matter o' selling hard cider, and he went on a round o' visits among his relatives--aunts, nephews-in-law and I don't know what all--and 'twasn't till he'd had his fun and went back home to his wife that Bill could make the arrest without seeming to kind o' butt in, as you might say, and spoil the reunions."

"I should think he would make a queer kind of sheriff," said the visitor, "waiting all that time for sentimental reasons and then arresting a man when he went home just because his poor wife wasn't a relation?"

Mr. Corbin drew himself up and assumed a remote expression.

"That's as you look at it," he said in a chilly tone. "I may be a mite prejudiced in Bill's favor, as he married my son-in-law's youngest sister. Anything that concerns him concerns me, you understand."

CONQUERORS CONQUERED.

The Fate of Alexander, Hannibal, Caesar and Napoleon.

It is a remarkable and instructive fact that the careers of four of the most renowned characters that ever lived closed with violent or mournful deaths.

Alexander, after looking down from the dizzy heights of his ambition upon a conquered world and weeping that there were no more to conquer, died of intoxication in a scene of debauch or, as some suppose, by poison mingled in his wine.

Hannibal, whose name carried terror to the heart of Rome itself, after having crossed the Alps and put to flight the armies of the mistress of the world, was driven from his country and died at last of poison administered by his own hands in a foreign land, unlamented and unwept.

Caesar, the conqueror of 800 cities and his temples bound with chaplets dipped in the blood of a million of his foes, was miserably assassinated by those he considered his nearest friends.

Bonaparte, whose mandate kings and emperors obeyed, after filling the earth with the terror of his name, closed his days in lonely banishment upon a barren rock in the midst of the Atlantic ocean.

Such the four men who may be considered representatives of all whom the world calls great and such their end--intoxication or poison, suicide, murdered by friends, lonely exile.

Pointed With Scripture.

A bachelor rector of a western church was alone in his study when his housekeeper brought him the card of one of his parishioners, a spinster of means and charm.

When the lady was seated on the opposite side of his study table the rector looked at her inquiringly, expecting to hear something concerning parish work, in which she was active. To his surprise an embarrassed silence ensued, during which he vainly sought for something to say.

"Dr. Blank," began the lady at last in faltering tones, "do you think--can you fancy conditions under which a woman is--justified in proposing?"

"Why, yes," said the rector, after some deliberation.

"Thou art the man!" said the lady resolutely.

She was right.

A Ready Answer.

The captain of a schooner that trades between New York and Savannah is noted for his wit, and on every occasion that offers he loosens his shafts of humor, to the chagrin and embarrassment of its target. Sooner or later the stinger gets stung, and this chronic pun artist is no exception to the rule.

On one occasion when about two days out from New York he approached a group of sailors who were washing the forward deck, and, singling out a big, rawboned Irishman who was experiencing his first taste of sailor's life, he gravely asked, "Can you steer the mainmast down the fore-castle stairs?" Quick as a flash came the reply, "Yis, sor; I can if you will stand below and coil it up."--Philadelphia Ledger.

Rough on the Doctor.

One night as a Canadian doctor who lives in eastern Ontario was driving into a village he saw a chap, a little the worse for liquor, amusing a crowd of spectators with the antics of his trick dog. The doctor watched him awhile and said: "Sandy, how do you manage to train your dog? I can't teach mine to do anything."

Sandy, with that simple look in his eyes, said, "Well, you see, doc, you have to know more'n the dog or you can't learn him nothing."

An Ideal Husband.

The Man--And you really think you have an ideal husband, don't you? The Matron--I know I have. Why, he treats me as if he were a candidate for office and I was a voter.--Chicago News.
