A Trying Moment. Professor Leopold Schroetter was called to see the Crown Prince Fred-erick in 1887 before Sir Morrell Mackenzie had reached San Remo. The prince, evidently suspecting the worst. turned to Schroetter after the examina-tion and said, "I request the truth as to my allment." Schroetter hesitated and made an effort to direct the con-versation in another direction, but Frederick insisted. "I am a soldier," he said, "and can look death in the eye. I ask you now plainly, to the point, Is my complaint cancer?" Schroetter could hardly contain himself, and years after the scene when he re-called it he spoke of it as the most painful in his life. He conducted the crown prince to a chair and asked him to be seated. Then he said, "Your imperial highness, you are suffering from a serious complaint, and it is possible that it may develop into carcinoma, but that cannot be determined positively at this moment." Frederick be-came deathly pale, but never for a moment lost his self control and smiled grimly when he thanked the physician for his honesty.

Coming to an Understanding.

In the aniable way of villagers they were discussing the matrimonial af-fairs of a couple who, though recently wed, had begun to find the yoke of Hymen a burden. "'Tis all along o' these hasty marrigges," opined one caustic old gentle-man, who had been much to the fore in the discussion. "They did not un-derstand each other. They'd nobult knowed each other for a matter o' seven year." "Well, that seems long enough," said an interested lady listener. "Long eno": Bah! Ye're wrong! When a body's coortin' he canna be too careful. Why, my coortship lasted a matter o' nineteen year!"

"You certainly were careful," agreed the lady listener. "And did you find your plan successful when you mar-ried?"

"Ye jump to conclusions," said the old man impatiently. "I understood her then, so I didna marry her!"-St. James' Gazette.

Poor Comfort.

Apropos of the pretensions of those who might be counted as in society, Mrs. Bloomfield Moore in her book on "Sensible Etiquette" tells the following story:

A snobbish young man and his sister A should be after their return home from an even-ing party were criticising the company, quite unaware that their sensible old uncle was lying awake in his chamber and could hear every word from where they stood in the corridor. "Why, even the Grinders were there, and you know their father was a gro-cer. I was never in such a mixed com-pany," said the sister. "And we will never he acrain if Lean

"And we will never be again if I can help it," answered the brother. The uncle called out: "Children, what do you think your grandfather was He was a bootmaker, and some people say not a very honest one either. Now go to bed."

certain rings, the wearing of which prevented cramp or epilepsy. They were made from the metal of decayed coffins and consecrated with an elab orate ceremony, some details of whic are still preserved. They were "highly recommended by the medical profes-sion" about 1557, for Andrew Boorde in his "Breviary of Health," speaking of cramp says, "The kynge's majes-ite hath a great helpe in this matter in hallwing cramps with in hallowing crampe ringes with-out money or petition." Occasionally cramp rings played a persuasive part in diplomacy. Lord Berners, our am-bassador at the court of Charles V., wrote in 1508 "to my lorde cardinali's grace" for some "crampe ryngs," with trust to "bestowe them well, by God's grace."-Westminster Gazette.

In Persia two sticks a foot long are placed in the coffin to prop up the arms of the corpse when it rises from the grave and is being questioned by the angel Gabriel. After it has sati fied the angel that it is the body of a true Mussulman it will receive strength to stand alone. A glance from a dog is necessary to drive away the spirit of defilement, and for this purpose a street cur is brought into the room of death and its eyes led to the corpse by a tempting bit of bread laid on the still breast.

The South Sea Whiskers Trade. "In the south seas whiskers is a rari-ty," said a sailor. "Most of them there Maoris has hairless faces, like a girl's When a young Maori, at the age of siz teen or so, finds himself endowed with whiskers he blesses the day when he was born, for now, by tar, he know his whiskers will keep him from wan in his old age.

"Puzzlin', ain't it? I'll explain it ou to you.

"The Maori chiefs down Tahiti way wears a complicated headdress, and a necessary part of this here headdress is a lot of stiff tufts of white whiskers The headdress makers pays for white whiskers their weight in gold.

"So, you see, old fellers with snow spinach is in demand in the south sear Contractors keeps herds of these old fellers, the same as drovers keeps sheep, and reg'lar in June and December the semiannual shearin' comes off. "The curly white harvest is loaded on to pirogues, and the contractors put out over the roarin' coral reefs. from island to island sells to the chiefs big handfuls of that there snowy flut for its weight in French gold."-New Orleans Times-Democrat.

The Bottle at Ship Launches. Down to Charles 11.'s time it was customary to name and baptize a ship after she was launched, sometimes week or two after. The old Tudor method used for men-of-war was still in use. Pepys' "Diary" shows that. The ship was safely got afloat, after which some high personage went on board with a special silver "standing eup" or "flaggon" of wine, out of which he drank, naming the ship, and poured a libation on the quarter deck. The cup was then generally given to the dockyard master shipwright as a memento. When did the present usage of naming and baptizing a ship before she is sent afloat come in? I trace the last explicit mention of the old method to 1664, when the Royal Katherine was launched (see Pepys). The first men-tion of smashing a bottle of wine on the bows of a British man-of-war that I have found is in a contemporary newspaper cutting of May, 1780, de scribing the christening of H. M. S Magnanime at Deptford, but nothing is hinted that it was then a new custom. -London Notes and Queries.

Almost at Rest.

A kind hearted but somewhat close fisted man who was sorely afflicted with a conscience came to a friend holding a visiting card in his hand. He looked deeply troubled. "I know," said he, "this man wants to borrow money. I know he will drink it. What am to do?'

"It is perfectly simple," said the friend. "Send down word that you are out." "I cannot," he said. "I have never told a lie in my life." "Then," said his friend, "lend all your money to me, and you can tell him you haven't a penny in your pocket." After some hesitation the kind hearted man complied and, having seen his caller, returned. "Well," asked his friend, "are your conscience and mind at rest?"

"Not quite, man," he replied, "but they will be as soon as you have given me my money back."—Bellman.

Ho Writ. A well known dramatic critic visiting Stratford on Shakespeare's birthday and, hearing the clangor of the bells which, from their tower in the old church where the poet lies buried, awoke the little town to its devotions aword the interform to its devolutions approached a wintry headed street sweeper in front of Irving's inn and said: "Who is the fellow they're mak-ing this fuss about? I see you have Shakespeare hotels, Shakespeare gin-gerbread, and only the other day I saw a man driving to town some pigs called 'Shakespeare's best.' Who is he -the fellow who lived in that tumble-down shanty yonder?" The "oldest in-habitant" megaphoned his ear and, think he writ for the Bible."

Restlessness.

Mere restlessness is not a matter for which physicians are often consulted. It is on the face of it an unimportant malady, but when it exists in sufficient intensity to form the subject of com-plaint and to induce the sufferer to seek advice it is usually found to be the superficial indication of a grave underlying condition.-Hospital.

Memory Training. If men only realized how great an asset in life is a retentive memory they would take care to see that their chil dren's were properly trained. The simplest method consists in learning every day a few lines by heart. None of our faculties can be trained so easily as that of memory.-Stuttgart Familienblatt.
