BLUE BELL.

Warning.

All persons are hereby forbidden from trespassing upon the property of this Company without a permit from this office, or the Manager at the works. KEYSTONE POWDER MFG. CO. Emporium, Pa., August 1st, 1903.

SIZERVILLE.

W. H. Mitchell, Dentist, Emporium. The buckwheat crop here is excellent. We look for cheap pancakes.

No one went from here to hear Bryan's great speech at Buffalo Monday—no one seemed interested enough to drop so much car fare.

Where the local freight pulled in here Wednesday morning Conductor Withers, while assisting in unloading some barrels of oil had the misfortune to have the plank slip off from the car door and fall on his ankle—both plank and barrels. He was so badly injured that he was taken back to Emporium for treatment.

The Box Social at the school house on Friday last was well attended and patronized. Ablely managed by the pastor, Rev. Allen, who was well pleased with the hospitality extended him.

The officials of the P. R. R. were here looking over the ground where Hon. F. D. Councilman's auto wreck occurred a week ago. They dined at his sanitarium just the same, and partook of a square meal regardless of conditions.

W. A. Sprong is taking in the sights in the eastern states, among the scenes of his boyhood days. He will return with some relics, no doubt.

We are nearly having a water famine here, wells have gone dry that were never known to fail before. Some are suggesting the sending up of a balloon loaded with explosives to be discharged while in the skies and see if rain will not be produced. Others think such performances are delusions.

Thus far candidates have been scarce. Looks as if there are no political fences to repair. There will be a few more Republican votes cast this election than last—half-dozen at least.

P. O. Inspector Rose made his annual visit here last week and found the office in excellent condition. He complimented the P. M., for the efficient service rendered.

Everyone from here that attended the county fair were delighted with the exhibition, which entitles the management to great credit for their untiring efforts to make it a success.

Mrs. W. R. Sizer has treated her store and residence to a coat of paint which makes a marked improvement.

The forest fires are all under control around here. Quite a large amount of damage has been done and a big expense to the county and state.

A fine large buck was seen in Wykoff Run at a place where the cattle had been salted. His life is short for several parties are watching for him.

The dry weather, dynamite and sledge hammer have cleaned all the large trout out of Wykoff Run and the kingfishers and water snakes are taking all of the small ones.

The Boston Post says: "No man should pin his faith to a cocktail." Superfluous advice, it seems, when swallowing them is so much simpler.

ROOSEVELT MAY ENTER CAMPAIGN

President Frets at Enforced Inactivity in Nation's Battle for Presidency.

Robt. Simpson, the Staff Correspondent of Pittsburgh Gazette-Times, wires his paper an interesting letter from Cincinnati, dated Sept. 20th, from which we make a few extracts:

Theodore Roosevelt has been chafing under the restraint placed upon him by his presidential office, and that his fighting spirit has been aroused by recent events is information that must come from him, if from any source. He has been reluctant for obvious reasons to appear prominently in the campaign. But it is difficult for the President to restrain the man and at any moment the man may assert himself. It will be well to keep one ear toward the east.

Because Cincinnati is the home of both Taft and Foraker, the incident of the Archbold letters continues the one large topic of conversation. It had more than anything else to do with keeping Senators Crane and Dick here to-day. Senator Crane had been billed for an appearance for nearly a week before he arrived enroute to Chicago. He could have completed his business yesterday and departed last night.

DON'T KICK A MAN WHEN DOWN.
To-day with Senator Dick, he visited Senator Foraker. It was described as only a social call. Late in the afternoon he visited Judge Taft and also met Charles P. Taft, who had just returned from a long vacation on Long Island. This was termed a social incident only.

With their departure the Foraker discussion is likely to lag, for Judge Taft's opinion is that it would be unmanly to kick a man when he is down.
His friends who could not induce him to speak on Friday, and cannot persuade him to make an expression now, point out that the allegations made against Senator Foraker and the senator's replies to them are justification of the whole attitude of Taft and Theodore Roosevelt, who have been endeavoring "to put a stop to the corrupt alliance between business and politics."

FORAKER CASE JUSTIFIES ROOSEVELT.
Foraker's opposition, they say, was originally to Roosevelt because of his policies and was transferred to Taft because Taft stood for the things that Roosevelt stood for, and his nomination was "the most emphatic rebuke possible to such practice as have been exposed." This, they say, should rivet the attention of the country to the fact that Taft stands as the extreme anti-type and opposite of these practices and that Foraker's bitter opposition to Taft's nomination is really a warranty of Taft's sincerity.

Unwise Combination.
To the mind of Mrs. Abigail Jennings there was a sort of disloyalty in admitting to any outsider that a native of Willowby could be really eccentric. As for anything beyond eccentricity, Mrs. Jennings would never have admitted it, even in the case of Miss Rachel Gregg, who was frankly called crazy by the summer visitors.

"Now, Mrs. Jennings," said one of the boarders, "do you really mean that you've never known Miss Gregg to do anything that you'd call crazy?"
"No, I haven't," said Mrs. Jennings, with a firm and unyielding expression about her prominent chin.

"Why, what do you think of her sending that bag of eggs over to the corners to Mrs. Cole right in the box with her laundry work and never telling the stage driver and letting him throw the box right off?" inquired the summer boarder. "Mrs. Cole says there's one shirt waist she'll never be able to wear again."

"Well," said Mrs. Jennings calmly, "I should say about that as I have about a number of little things Rachel does and has done. She may lack in wisdom and forethought now and again. But, then, who doesn't, I'd like to know?"—Youth's Companion.

Showing Our Monkey Blood.
The batsman, congratulated on his home run, slapped himself proudly on the chest and began to boast of still finer home runs that he had made in the past.

"Did you see that gesture, the stricken breast?" said an ethnologist of Harvard. "Whenever we make that gesture in our vanity we prove the Darwinian theory up to the hilt."

"You know the gorilla. Kipling and Du Chailou describe him—an enormous ape that in his indomitable bravado beats his breast with a sound like the rolling of the muffled drums of Memorial day."

"As big as a bull, as swift as a cat, as powerful as an elephant, the gorilla believes himself unconquerable, and in the vain glory of that belief he inflates his lungs and beats his swollen breast till the jungle rings like a gong."

"We in our moments of foolish and excessive vanity inflate our lungs and slap our swollen breasts."

"Thus, alas, we show the monkey blood in us."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

[From our Regular Correspondent.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21, 1908.

It is expected that the President will be at the White House by the time this letter is printed. The majority of the summer absentees has already returned. Postmaster General George Von L. Meyer returned to his home in Washington yesterday. He has spent part of the summer outing, hunting and fishing in the North, at the family's summer home in Hamilton, Mass. It was there that Mrs. Meyer lost by burglary fifteen thousand dollars' worth of jewelry. Mrs. Meyer and her daughters, who spent the early summer abroad, are not expected home until next month. The Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Cortelyou who have been spending the summer at Huntington, Long Island, are expected home next week. They have been living on a farm with all modern improvements, it is said, and their young family, of whom there are four, have had a very enjoyable time. Mrs. Robert McKee, the daughter of a former President, Benjamin Harrison, and the mother of the once famous Baby McKee, is expected to spend a portion of the coming season in Washington. She is now with old friends, the family of Senator Elkins, at Elkins, West Virginia.

There is universal sympathy in the city for the sad accident which befell Orville Wright and Lieutenant Selfridge, when they fell from the 75 foot elevation in Wright's aeroplane. During the past week, thousands of people from the city and from other parts of the country have flocked in automobiles and in carriages to Fort Myer where the wonderful experiments that have filled the world with expectation have been made. Great as has been the advance in recent months, resulting in flying feats at which the world wondered, it is now clear that the experimental stage has not yet been passed. A test at the hands of so competent a flyer as Orville Wright who has broken all records, was no doubt as promising as human ingenuity could make it, but human ingenuity cannot prevent accident with wagon, automobile, or any machine, and when that accident happened in midair, it is necessarily more tragic and disastrous than on terra firma. Skeptics with reference to the success of flying machines are strengthened—and with reason—in their disbelief and the accident at Fort Myer has proven almost conclusively that it will never be possible to use airships for long voyages or for the transportation of passengers. The slightest accident will force the machine to the ground and even if the passengers escape accident, the machine may be miles from a point where it can be repaired. Mr. Thomas A. Edison in a recent interview given in Salt Lake City predicted that in five years or less airships will be carrying passengers across the ocean making the trip in a day at the rate of two hundred miles an hour. Mr. Edison also predicts that the North Pole can and will be reached in a forty hour trip by an airship. But imagine an airship or an aeroplane crossing the ocean when some mishap occurs such as is daily occurring with the motor car for example. Either it would be thrown into the deep, or, if it were able to maintain itself in the air, it would not be possible to move or to repair the damage. The experiments will go on. They have received too great an impetus to be arrested, but it is probable that the youngest child to-day will not live to see the airship, whether aeroplane or balloon, commercially successful.
