Worst of All.

Mr. Lane, Mr. Hobart and Mr. Meek had been off fishing the day before. They had gone unexpectedly from the postoffice, where they met, and neither Mrs. Lane, Mrs. Hobart nor Mrs. Meek had been informed of their whereabouts until nightfall. "And it did beat all what poor luck we'd had!" said Mr. Lane when the three friends met the next day.

"I tried to explain to Sadie that we kep' staying in the hopes of fetching home something that would show why we'd stayed, but she said we'd acted like a parcel o' yearlings and it would be one while before she'd have a hot apple pie for my dinner again and dumplings. She ran me uphill and down, I tell ye."

"Maria spoke of my clothes," said
Mr. Hobart forlornly. "She pointed out the way the dampness had cockled that coat I had on. She said 'twouldn't ever be the same again and if I knew of anybody that was going to spend summer days heating great irons and pressing out clothes for a man like me she didn't!"

"Marthy never said a word," said Mr. Meek as the other two men turned to him, but as they remarked with one accord, "That's the kind of wife to accord, "That's the kind of wire to have!" Mr. Meek looked much de-

"The only trouble is." he added, "she hasn't spoken yet, and I don't know when she will."

She Drew the Line.

Seeking redress for domestic troubles a negro woman who resembled nothing so much as she did the "before taking" half of an antifat remedy appeared at court.

"I's a wronged woman," she hissed in a give-me-back-those-papers voice. "Ah want redress."

"What's the trouble?" inquired the sympathetic judge.

"It's 'bout mah ole man. He's done been caayin' on high wif a lot uv deese niggah gals, an' it's got so baad twill Ah don' see him more'n once a Somephin's got t' be done.

The judge's eye held a crafty gleam. "You are seeking a divorce—a legal separation?" he questioned.
"Go 'long, man! Divo'ce nothin'! Think I'm gwine t' gin him what he wants and 'low dat man who dispote all his cussedness is do handsomest nig. his cussedness is de handsomest nignis cussedness is de nandsomest nig-gah in Kansas City t' go skyshootin' roun' 'mong dem gais? No, sah. Ah don' want no divo'ce ner dat legal septitution yer's talkin' 'bout. What Ah wants is an injunction!"—Kansas City Independent.

Mary Was Spoiled.
A doctor in one of the West Philadelphia children's homes tells the story of a woman who came to him one day in a most perturbed state of She had taken home her daughter of five years the week previous, after a stay of a year in the home, and found she had an elephant on her "Oh, sir," she said to the doctor, "whatever can I do with Mary? You have made her far too grand for her own home. Why, the first day she was back she refused to be dressed in the morning till she had a bath; then she would eat no breakfast whatever because she wanted fruit and some serious food' first, and, last of all, she put a saucer of water at her place at the table and she dips her fingers in that every few minutes. Sure, doctor, I don't know what I'll do," and the woman passed out, shaking her head as if the problem was certainly too much for her.—Philadelphia Record.

The Poor Member.

"Brother Lastly," said the spokesman, "I have an unpleasant duty to There is a report that you have said that one of the best and most worthy members of our congrega-tion is unable to attend service often on account of not having good enough clothes. We have come to ask the name of that member. We don't know of any such person, and a report of that kind is likely to reflect upon us as a congregation that does not look after its poor but worthy members. Will you tell me who it is?"

Rev. Mr. Lastly, with a brave attempt to be cheerful, "it's my wife."

Playing Goethe Three Ways. "I made a bad break today.

"How was that?"

"There is a Chicago woman visiting Julia Dean, and while I was there she insisted upon talking about Gerty.

Pretty soon I asked her if Gerty was her daughter. You should have seen her flare up! And then I somehow found out she meant Goaty."
"Who?"

"Oh, you know—the great German author."—Somerville Herald.

His Modest Request.

A man once asked Thackeray to lend him 5 shillings, which he would convert into £20,000. Asked how, he explained that he knew a young woman with £20,000 who he knew would marry him if he asked her, but he had pawned his teeth and wanted 5 shillings to redeem them in order to propose effectively.

Books and Titles.

The more accomplished way of using books at present is to serve them as some do lords--learn their titles and then boast of their acquaintance. Jonathan Swift.

The Andromeda Nebula

One of the most astonishing objects in the heavens, especially when photo graphed, is the great nebula in the constellation Andromeda, which is vis ible as a misty speck to the naked eye It has long puzzled astronomers, be cause while its structure—a series of vast rings surrounding a central mass—suggests a gaseous constitution, its spectrum is continuous, resembling that of the sun. It has been suggested that it may be composed of stars con-stituting a universe external to ours Recent studies of its parallax, however, indicate that it is nearer to us than some of the well known stars such as Capella, and Mr. J. Ellard Gore, the English astronomer, points out that if the Andromeda nebula were assumed to be an external universe, having a diameter comparable with that of the Milky way, its mass would be forty million million million times the mass of the sun. This is regarded as incredible and so may be taken as an additional argument in favor of the view that this nebula is a member of our system.-Youth's

A Curious Superstition.

There is a curious superstition common to Shetlanders and Cingalese How islanders so wide apart—some 15,000 miles—managed to adopt each other's views one does not know, but here is the fact. The rice cultivators of Ceylon and the fishermen of Shetland resemble each other in one or two rather remarkable points. They re-frain from speaking of the implements of their calling by their names. They call them something else, by names known only to themselves. The reason is that if the evil spirit were to think that they were speaking of spades and rakes or of nets and hooks he would be tempted to damage them or even to appropriate them. The train of thought is the same with both races: "There is an evil spirit always on the lookout for opportunities of doing mischief. He even hears what we say. If we let him understand that we are talking about our implements and tools, we shall direct his attention to them and shall suggest to him a way of doing an injury. Therefore we will agree to call a boat or a spade by some fancy name known only to ourselves."

Coronets.

The coronet of a duke consists of alternate crosses and leaves, the leaves being a representation of the leaves of the parsley plant. The princes of the blood royal also wear a similar crown. The state headgear of a marquis con sists of a diadem surrounded by flowers and pearls placed alternately. An earl, however, has neither flowers nor leaves surmounting his circlet, but only points rising, each with a pearl on the top. A viscount has neither flowers nor points, but only the plain circlet adorned with pearls, which, regardless of number, are placed on the crown itself. A baron has only six pearls on the golden border, not raised, to dis-tinguish him from an earl, and the number of pearls render his diadem distinct from that of a viscount.

A Bit of Blue Sky.
Professor John Tyndall, who, with many great gifts, possessed a singular skill in devising and conducting beau-tiful experimental illustrations, actually produced in 1869 a bit of blue sky in the lecture room. In a glass tube three feet in length and three inches in diameter he exhausted the air until it was less than one-tenth the density of the atmosphere we breathe and represented the rarer air high overhead. Into this exhausted air he introduced nitrite of butyle vapor, which is extremely volatile. Then a strong beam of light in a room otherwise dark was passed through the mixture, and in the glass tube there glowed a beautiful blue cloud, rivaling in color the finest Italian sky. Here was blue sky brought down to earth.

According to History.

A woman who belongs to a community called the Sisters of St. John the Baptist not long ago spent a month her arrival she went to the local postoffice and inquired if any letters had come for Sister Bernardine. The rural postmaster looked bewildered.

"Sister who?" he asked incredulously. "Sister Bernardine," repeated the lady, "a sister of St. John the Bap-Her Limitations.

"These pianos look too cheap," said the young woman, her brows contracting slightly. "Show me some of the best you've got." "Yes, ma'am," said the salesman.

Too Well Imitated.

It is no easy matter for a violin maker to rival the famous Stradivarius instruments, but this an American maker did, and did so effectively that experts pronounced his violin a genuine Stradi-

The successful man was the late George Gemunder, a famous violin maker of New York. His remarkable ability as a preparer of violins was known to many a distinguished player, such as Ole Bull, Remenyi and Wilhelmj. But he made, so runs the story, his greatest success at the Paris exposition of Eiffel tower fame. To that exhibition he sent an imitation Stradiva rius and to test its merits had it placed on exhibition as the genuine article.

A committee of experts carefully examined the instrument and pronounced It a Stradivarius. So far Mr. Gemunder's triumph was complete. But now came a difficulty. When he claimed that it was not an old violin, but a new one made by himself, the committee would not believe him. They declared he never made the instrument and pro-nounced him an impostor. He had done his work too well.

Can't Twiddle Their Thumbs

The gorilla and chimpanzee, which belong to the higher order of apes, have many points of resemblance to man, but there is one thing they can-not do-that is, twiddle their thumbs. In the gorilla the thumb is short and does not reach much beyond the bottom of the first joint of the forefinger. It is very much restricted in its movements, and the animal can neither twiddle his thumbs nor turn them round so that the tips describe a circle There are the same number of bones in the hand of a gorilla as in the hand of a man, but the thumbs of the monkey have no separate flexor or bending muscle. This is why a monkey always keeps the thumb on the same side as the fingers and never bends it round any object that may be grasped. In the gorilla the web between the fingers extends to the second joint, the fingers taper to the tips, and there is a callos ity on the knuckles on which the animal rests when walking on all fours.

Fickleness In Penmanship.

Speaking of check signatures and forgery, a downtown paying teller remarked: "One of the most peculiar points in our business is one little comprehended by the public. I mean the embarrassment caused by the man whose signature is seldom the same, or nearly so, two weeks in succession.

"This fickleness is not intentional. It is in almost every case temperamental. The man guilty of it is generally nervous and not infrequently is greatly lacking in stability of character. At times you, as a layman, would hardly believe it possible that his signature on two different checks was the work of the same hand. "Of course we come to know these cases in time, and there are always certain characteristics in a person' handwriting which the expert can detect and which go far to convince. Nevertheless the changeable signature is a nuisance and involves an added peril."—New York Globe.

How Men and Women Face Death.

How do men and women face death when the sentence is pronounced by the doctor? A medical man tells us his experience. Tell the man of higher type and greater intelligence, he says, that he is facing death and he begins to fight, demands a consultation, talks about going to specialists and fights grimly to the finish. Tell a woman the same facts, and she lies back to await her fate. All women are fatal-On the other hand, tell a man that he has one chance in a thousand to recover if he will undergo an operation, and he will trust to his own strength and endurance rather than undergo the knife. The woman will choose the thousandth chance and sub-mit to the operation with astounding calmness.-Woman's Life.

Burning With Curiosity.

A certain famous authoress who is much worried by unknown correspondents has taken her revenge in a somewhat eccentric fashion. She received letter from a woman informing her that the writer had named her last baby after her and requesting the authoress views on her choice. She received a thick envelope, heavily sealed, with this inscription: "Not to be opened till baby's thirtieth birthday." Now the mother is worrying herself day and night as to the contents of the envel-

Mr. William Watson, when ill in London and attempting a dinner for which he had no appetite, scribbled these lines on a scrap of paper, which he threw to his attendant:
