The Bull the Matadore Found It Most

There is no description of a bullfight in Mrs. Maud Howe Elliott's book, Sun and Shadow In Spain," but ther is a record of a meeting with a matdore in the studio of the court painte Don Jose Villegas, and the ensuin conversation, a part of which reveals the bullfighter in an unexpectedly gen tle light. It also makes plain the fundamental reason why Americans of ject to bullfights.

"How many bulls have you killed? some one asked of the matadore.

"In twenty-five years I have killed 3,500 bulls."

"Were you ever afraid?"
"I have been afraid many, man

On those occasions I put my trust in my legs and ran as fast as I

"The bull, however, is the noblest of makes a cowardly attack from behind. He is so frank. He is terrible, though. A man needs nerve to face him when he comes into the ring pawing the earth and bellowing."

"Will you tell us about the bull that was the hardest of all to kill?"

The matadore's face changed.
"He was a white bull," he said slowly, "and he didn't want to fight. When he first came in he put his muzzle in my hand. He followed me about like a little dog. I led him with the cloak wherever I wanted to go. Yes, that was the hardest bull of all to kill."

THE "GHOST FLUID."

A Test by Which May Be Discerned the Digital Effluvia

the Officer Emeries.

There is an experiment, first made by Dr. J. Maxwell, advocate general at the court of appeals in Paris, a distinguished magistrate and physician which may be repeated in any drawing room.

Place a screen covered with a dark colored cloth in front of a window so that the light falls full upon it. Be tween the window and the screen put the subject of your experiment. him hold his hands, palms toward the breast, finger tips touching, in such a position that they are projected agains the dark background of the screen Then bid him slowly separate his hands, keeping the fingers extended widely. Standing behind him you will observe a sort of bluish gray cloud which seems to unite one hand to the other. Eight people out of ten will other. Eight people out of ten win see this, says Vance Thompson in Hampton's Magazine. In 300 tests made by Dr. Maxwell personally 250 folk of one sex and the other discerned the digital effluvia; about 5 per cent saw it tinged a decided blue, two saw it yellow in tone, and in one instance spectator saw it of a reddish hue.

The experiment succeeds best in a warm room. Cold and damp work against it. The duration of durability is four or five seconds.

The strangest shark story which wer came to the writer's ears was of a shark that charged a steamer. This was in Queen Charlotte's sound, and an account of the incident appeared in a Vancouver paper. The captain of the steamer, which was a small craft of only fifty tons or so, saw the shark on the surface on the port bow and could not resist the temptation of tak ing a shot at it with his rifle. He hit his mark, whereupon the monster, said to have been fully twenty feet in length, deliberately charged the steamer. The boat quivered from stem to stern, and the captain said afterward that it was like striking a rock. After this display of temper Master Shark had had enough of it and sank out of sight .- T. C. Bridges in Chambers

Did He Mean to Be Funny?

The editor of a newspaper whose policy it is to print many letters from correspondents in neighboring towns recently received such a communication from his representative in one place as to which he was not quite sure. He could not decide whether the correspondent was unconsciously humorous or whether he was endeav oring to comply with the standing instructions of the paper to "always be on the lookout for any little touch of humor that may brighten up our columns." The item read as follows: "Mr. Harry Spinks, the well known butcher of this place, has been losing flesh rapidly of late."—Lippincott's.

FILIAL DUTY.

An Example From the Chinese of a Good Little Boy.

In China the "Book of Filial Duty" has been employed to instruct the young for the last 2,500 years. In it are twenty-four examples for good boys. What these examples are like may be understood from the story of Wu Meng, example No. 20. Wu Meng, it seems, was very obedient to his parents. One day at the age of eight toes annoyed his parents while they were trying to sleep. Presently he hit upon a plan to rescue them.

Says the author of this classic: "The buzzing of the mosquitoes sounds like 'ying ying,' and their united hum is almost equal to thunder. His tired parents are reclining on their bed, their counterparents are reclining on their bed. their countenances aiready sunk i slumber. Legions of mosquitoes fiercely attack them, alternately retreating and advancing. The insects disturb the dreaming sleepers, and with an noyance they toss from side to side. "Wu sees them sucking his parents' blood, which causes his heart to grieve. His flesh, he thinks, can be easily pierced, but that of his parent is hard to penetrate. Lying on the bed, he threw off his clothes, and soon, feeling the pain of their attacks, he cried, I have no dread of you, nor have you any reason to fear me!

"'Although I have a fan, I will not use it, nor will I strike you with my hand. I will lie very quiet and let you gorge to the fu".

Thus did the parents of Wu Meng get a chance to sleep in peace.

COLOMBIAN ETIQUETTE.

Daily Handshaking and Greeting Consume a Lot of Time.

It was the third or fourth day out from Santa Marta, Colombia, and early n the morning when one of the South American passengers came on deck. Another South American arose from his deck chair, extended his hand and as the men shook hands inquired after the health of the newcomer, his wife and his children.

As they had parted company only about eight hours before in the smoking room, this seemed like unnecessary courtesy. The observer noticed that this happened in the case of all the Colombians on board, so he asked one man about it.

"It is a custom of the country," said he. "On the occasion of meeting a person for the first time each day it is etiquette to shake hands and to make inquiries about the health of the person so greeted and of his relatives. would not be considered polite to do

Continuing, this man told of taking walk one day in Bogota with a merchant of the place. They were bent on business and were to cover a distance that might be made rather easily in ten minutes. Because of the necessary stops to make the customary in-quiries and to shake hands with friends of the merchant the trip took nearly an hour.—New York Sun.

The Drawback.

Being eager to know how his off-spring, Haymow junior, was getting along in the big metropolis, Haymow senior one day repaired thither from his rural habitat and sought informa ion of his brother, long since estab lished in the city.

"Waal," said Haymow senior, "what

"Watt," said Haymow senior, "what do you hear about Ebenezer?"
"Oh, I understand," remarked the young hopeful's uncle, "that he is in-valuable in his new job." "I swan!" "Moreover, I understand that the boss simply can't do without him." "How you talk!" "And Ebenezer'll be a partner within a year or so, according to what I hear from the same source." Haymow senior stroked his beard highly satisfied.

"By the way, who told you all this about Ebenezer?" he inquired. "Ebenezer."

A countryman, having been summoned to appear before the magistrate for not having a sign on his cart, was The magistrate asked him if he had anything to say for himself, and he replied that he had a difficult question to ask which he could not solve him self.

"The question is this," he said. "The wheels of the cart belonged to John the miller, and the body of the cart belongs to the vicar, and the bag of old bones (meaning the horse) belongs me. Now, gentlemen, if you can tell me what name I can put on it I will have it done immediately." He was let off.—London Answers.

HUMAN BAIT.

The Men Who Gather Leeches In the Swamps of England.

Pale and lean, he spoke in a low toice, crumbling a water cracker: "Divin' is hard work, and sulphur minin' is hard work, but how'd you like to be bait at 4 shillin' a day:

That ain't quite a dollar. "I was human bait for a leech dealer in England all one spring. It was back in the eighties, but I ain't never recov-ered the healthy color and weight what I lost. I guess I never will now

"Down Norfolk way I baited—down in the Norfolk broads. Broads is swamps. All them swamps, together with the mild, moist climate, makes Norfolk a great place for leeches. Me and a dozen other chaps was leech

"We would wade in with our breeches rolled up to our knees, and as soon as wo'd feel a leech on our legs we'd tear him off and drop him in a basket slung from the shoulder. Quick as thunder we'd do it, but he'd be considerable plumped out even in that little while. And when a dozen leeches settled on you together the last of 'em by the ime you got round to him would be a fat and heavy as a lump of lead, whilst you'd be that much lighter natcherly.

"In the late spring the leeches to to deep water. Then the bait had to strip and wade in up to their chins. With all that surface to look after, we played a losin' game with the leeches. The quickest of us couldn't stand more'n four hours of it without most faintin' from weakness. And the pain! For some parts of the human bait is

SAFE BOTH WAYS.

Way Rajah Birbar Saved His

Head by Ready Wit. Rajah Birbar, a boon companion of the Emperor Akbar, the great con-temporary of Queen Elizabeth, was a notable wit. The story goes that the emperor once sent Birbar with a message to the king of Persia.

The latter, for some reason or other, bore a grudge toward the rajah and in order to see him lose the emperor's

He asked Birbar: "Which of us two is greater in power and majesty—I or Akbar? But, mind you, if your answer is in any way unfavorable to me I will order your head to be struck

"Your majesty," replied Birbar with-out loss of time, "is like the full moon, while the emperor, my master, resembles the crescent."

The king was highly pleased with his reply and let him go.

This news was, however, carried to Akbar, who was wild with rage when he heard it. When Birbar returned to his master's court he was asked to explain himself on pain of death.

"My comparison," said Birbar,
"meant only this much and nothing more—that the decline of the Persian king's power had commenced, just as the full moon, after it is full, goes on waning, while your majesty is destined to rise on and one till, like the crescent becoming the full moon in time, it will shine forth with magnificent splendor

The emperor, who was a great patron of wit and wisdom, heaped the rajah with rewards.

"To remove shiny spots from coat elbows and trousers seats," said a clerk

-"I'll tell you how it is done."
The sun was strong on him as, upon his lofty stool, he munched his midday sandwich from thin, ink smeared fingers, but on his old clerk's coat and old trousers no shiny spots reflected the light. "'Clerks' elbow' such spots are called," he said. "It's like housemaids" knee. To cure it you soak the glittering spot in cold water for half an very stiff thistle-and you rub the spot with it till a nap or fuzz is raised up. No Sand In Sandpaper.

"There is no sand in sandpaper," said the manufacturer. "It is powdered glass that does the business. That's where the broken bottles go to.' $\mathbf{H}\mathbf{e}$ nodded toward a mass of broken bot-tles in the yard. "We powder the glass into half a dozen grades," he said. "We coat our paper with an even layer of hot glue. Then without loss of time we spread on the glass powder Finally we run a wooden roller lightly over the sheets to give them a good surface. When in the past they made sandpaper of sand it wouldn't do a quarter of the work that glass paper does."-Cincinnati Enquirer.
