Tariff Practically Settled.

The long and bitter struggle over the tariff question has been practically settled by the conference committee of house and senate. The house rates on gloves and hosiery was agreed upon, in return for free oil, hides, and reduced tariff on coal, print paper and iron ore. The hide and leather schedule was adjusted to suit the President, who made a determined stand for free hides. The conferees' report puts them on the free list with reductions in duties on leather, boots and shoes and harness. While this measure will not be all that the country wishes for, it will possibly stand until the country gets a whack at the insurgents. We do not believe in lowering the fence one dollar, or one cent, where American laborers or American manufacturers will be compelled to compete with the pauper European labor. We are surprised, as well as disgusted when we read the nonsense in this week's East Emporium Independent, when the erratic editor says, "the whole tariff fabric is a farce and an imposition on the American masses." Indeed where would the American laborer and mechanic be to-day with all Europe dumping the wares from its pauper labor? How many laborers would own their own homes in America if they were compelled to labor for the same wage paid the downtrodden English or Welsh laborer. The only way American laborers can compete with paupers, is to starve their families. No! the day will never come in this country, we hope, when we will make way for foreigners "who can supply us at what an article is really worth." We ought to and can make a great many things in this country cheaper but we Americans will not, because we have the best educated, best housed and happiest laborers, mechanics and farmers in the world and they will right any wrongs perpetrated at any time by the law makers. You and your free trade gang can go to Europe and enjoy the life of that down-trodden class that cannot save sufficient money to come to protection America—made so by the grandest, most patriotic and ablest statesmen the world ever knew—Protective Tariff Republicans and Democrats. We have no patience with tariff for revenue advocates—they are not true Americans.

Continue to euss the American tariff, Mr. Editor, that made it possible for thousands upon thousands of young men in this country to save from their earnings (the best paid labor in the world) to obtain an education and to-day fill responsible positions in every branch of business. It would be a "black Friday" when we went back to the dark days of free trade, soup houses and perdition.

I was unable to rest and in the morning would be worn out. My kidneys were very weak, the secretions causing me much annoyance and embarrassment. Though I used many remedies I was unable to obtain relief until I took Doan's Kidney Pills, procured from Geo. Taggart's drug store. TWO SCHOOLS FOR THE BLIND

State Maintains Modern Institutions at Philadelphia and Pittsburg, Where Efficient Instruction is Given.

Pennsylvania is fortunate to have two magnificent schools for the education and training of the blind. One of these schools is situated at Overbrook, Pa., which is a beautiful suburb six miles from the heart of Philadelphia. It is accessible by the main line of the Pennsylvania railroad and two electric lines. This school embraces a space of 29 acres, which is divided into beautiful flower gardens and lawns and athletic field. This is the larger of the two schools and accommodates two hundred students.

The school in Pittsburg, Schenley Park, occupies about six acres in the most attractive residential section of the city.

Both schools are equipped with excellent gymnasiums and swimming pools, which afford splendid advantages for physical training and also recreation. The athletic fields are fitted with all sorts of apparatus for outdoor sports. The schools are divided into three departments, literary, musical, and industrial.

The literary department embraces a curriculum of a ten years course. Nearly all the subjects taught in the public schools are taught here. Those who are able to complete the course, are graduated and receive a diploma which is equal to that of any high school in the state.

The musical department consists of instruction in vocal and instrumental music. In connection with the department, tuning is taught to boys, which affords remunerative employment to those who become efficient tuners.

In the industrial department the boys are taught broom making, chair caning, carpet weaving, and hammock making. The girls are taught sewing by hand and machine, crocheting, knitting, and basket-making and domestic science.

These schools open their doors to any who are blind or who have not sufficient sight to attend the public schools.

No tuition is necessary if the applicant cannot afford to pay it, but they must furnish their own clothing and their fare to and from school.

The schools are in session from September to June. Every pupil must return home during July and August.

Every person that is interested in the cause of humanity should encourage the education and training of the sightless child. An education is more essential to the blind than to the seeing child, on account of the meagre opportunities in life.

"Work" should be the watchword for those interested in the blind, and begging should be prohibited, for it is degrading to the individual who practices it and detrimental to the education and progress of the class.

The modern idea of philanthropy is to encourage people to help themselves, which results in permanent and practical happiness.

Smiley says, "To help men to help themselves, is the highest form of patriotism and philanthropy."

Books for the blind may be borrowed from the home Teaching Society and Free Circulating Library, 1217 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

The Matilda Ziegler Magazine issued monthly, can be secured by writing to Mr. W. G. Holmes, Manager, 306 West Fifth-third street, New York City.

This magazine is a gift to the blind from Mrs. Ziegler.

The readers of this article are welcome to visit these schools whenever they have an opportunity.

MAIDS OF HONOR.

Their Position in the Royal Household of England.

Maids of honor are chosen by the queen herself from among the daughters of peers, who if not themselves connected with the royal household are personal friends of her majesty. A letter is always sent to the parents of the young lady requesting that as a personal favor to the queen she may be permitted to attend at court. As the position is undesirable and the salary is £300 a year, the request is invariably accepted, and then the newly chosen maid receives from the lord chamberlain the command for her first "wait."

The first thing brought to the maid of honor is her badge, which is a miniature picture of the queen set in brilliants and suspended to a ribbon. Just before the dinner hour the maid of honor in waiting has to stand in the corridor outside the queen's private apartments. She carries a bouquet, which on entering the dining room she lays at the right hand of the queen's plate.

The maid of honor sits at dinner next to the gentleman on the queen's right. This rule is relaxed when royal guests are present. After dinner, unless otherwise commanded, the maid of honor retires to her own room, whence, however, she is frequently fetched to read, sing, play the piano or take a hand at cards.—Cassel's Saturday Journal.

The Canary's Toilet.

Just watch your canary after he has had his daily bath. See how each separate feather is cleaned, pulled and looked over and how all the loose ones are taken out and dropped. All this is done by the bill, for a bird's neck is so flexible that it can be turned in all directions, but the bill cannot reach the head, and so Mr. Canary uses his foot. With it he combs his hair first on one side, then on the other, scratching very fast, as if to get all the tangles out. Then he uses his hair oil, for, although complexion powders are not known in the bird world, hair oil certainly is. Ladies and gentlemen alike carry it about with them. They have a little pouch or sack on the back near the tail for the purpose. When Mme. Bird wishes to use it she squeezes it out with her beak, just as you would press a rubber bulb. Then she lays the oil on her back just above her wings and rubs her head against it, turning her neck in all directions until every feather in her head is straight and shining.—Exchange.

Red Checks in Addison's Day.

It seems that the "beauty doctor" is by no means a modern invention. The Atlantic cites an amusing advertisement to this effect printed in Addison's Spectator:

The famous Bavarian Red Liqueur: Which gives such a delightful, blushing Colour to the Cheeks of those that are White or Pale, that it is not to be distinguished from a natural fine Complexion, nor perceived to be artificial by the nearest Friend. Is nothing of Paint, or in the least hurtful, but good in many Cases to be taken inwardly. It renders the Face delightfully handsome and beautiful; is not subject to be rubb'd off like Paint, therefore cannot be discovered by the nearest Friend. It is certainly the best Beautifier in the World. Is sold only at Mr. Pavn's Toyshop at the Angel and Crown in St. Paul's Church-yard, near Champside, at 3s. 6d. a Bottle, with Directions.

The Yaws.

On the west coast of Africa the natives call the raspberry a yaw. It happens that one of the pleasing diseases that come out from that quarter of the globe is characterized by dusky red spots that appear on the body and soon grow into ulcers about the size and looks of the raspberry. So this disease is called the yaws. It is contagious and downright disagreeable. White sailors bring it back with them to their own discomfort and the disgust of those at home. Yaws prevails also in the Fiji Islands and in Samoa, but in these two places children mainly are attacked, and the natives regard the disease in the same light as civilized persons look at measles—almost a certainty to have and the sooner over with the better.

Old Thoughts on April.

Old Nikolas Breton, in those delightful "fantasies" (1629) of his, grew more lyrical over April than over any other month. One reads such a passage as this with delight: "The Lark and the Lambe look up at the Sun, and the labourer is abroad by the dawning of the day; Sheepes eyes in Lambs heads tell kind hearts strange tales, while fath and troth make the true Lovers knot; the aged haire find a fresh life, and the youthful cheeks are as red as a cherry. It were a world to set down the worth of this month; but in summe, I thus conclude, I hold it the Heavens blessing, and the Earths comfort."—London Chronicle.

To Live Long.

Virchow, the German scientist, said the way to live long is to "be born with a good constitution, take care of it when you are young, always have something to do and be resigned if you find you cannot accomplish all you wish." It is easier to live long with a poor constitution than to violate the other conditions and reach old age.

A Bad Spell.

"Poor Jay! He never could spell, and it ruined him."
"How?"
"He wrote a verse to an heiress he was in love with, and he wrote 'bonny' for 'bonny.'—New York Journal.

His Funny Look.

"Say, Daisy, did yer see when I took hold of yer hand the funny look yer face gave me?"
"Go on, Tim, ma didn't give it to yer; you've always had it."—Life.

Let no man think he is loved by any man when he loves no man.—Epictetus.

Free Advice.

The telephone in the office of a prominent New York lawyer rang, and when a clerk answered it the lady on the other end refused to give her name, saying she wanted to see the lawyer himself on private business. As soon as the lawyer himself picked up the receiver, before he could make any inquiries, she began, "Oh, please tell me, must there not be two copies of a lease?"

"Why," he answered, "it is usual to give one to the landlord's agent and one to the lessee. But who are"—
"Yet the fact that the wife of the lessee had never seen a copy of the lease wouldn't keep it from being legally binding?"
"No," blinding from the lawyer, who quickly added, "But before I discuss the matter further may I ask to whom?"

There was a pretty little laugh. He admits it was pretty even now. "Oh, I'm Mrs. Brown, and I live on Broadway. You don't know me"—It was obvious likewise that he wouldn't—"but I've always heard your advice was so very valuable, and I wanted a lawyer, and so I just called you up. Goodby."

And when he asked for the number central gave him the Grand Central station!—New York Times.

Satisfied.

"People praise my work," said the artist boastfully.

"And they laugh at mine," rejoined the sad faced party, "but I don't mind."
"What is your line?" queried the artist.

"I'm a professional humorist," replied the other.—Chicago News.

The Offset Crank Shaft is what gives the Rambler engine its flexibility of power. The Rambler will run smoothly and quietly on high gear at 3 or 40 miles an hour. It allows the owner to conform easily to the limitations of congested city traffic, without constant gear changing.

Rambler

The Car with the Offset Crank Shaft

Touring in the country with a Rambler has an added charm, because it does its work so steadily and quietly when running slowly under load and on hills or in sand, where every ounce of power at slow engine speeds is needed.

Let us demonstrate the silence and comfort of the Rambler, by calling for you at your home some morning and taking you to your place of business.
