A Fish That Gives Paint.

The well known brown pigment call-d sepia is obtained from a ten armed octopus found principally in the Med-terranean and more especially at the nead of the Adriatic sea, where it is aught by the natives for food. The sepia is contained in a bag and s really the black fluid of which we ave all read as being discharged by he creature to cover its escape. Some aturalists say that the fluid is brownsh, which becomes more credible when we know that this is the source of sepia. The pigment is really a powder which dissolves in water. Its strength may be estimated by the fact that it will color 1,000 times its own bulk. Then the octopus has been killed the when the octopus has been killed the sack or bag is removed and dried to prevent putrefaction. The sepia is reated with ammonia or caustic soda, washed and dried. It is one of the nost durable of paints, except when ully exposed to the fierce rays of the sun, and an even surface can be obtained with it more easily than with most paints. Sepia has been obtained from a fossil cuttlefish thousands of years old and found to be quite good for paint.

The Change From Black to Red. "See that little woman who just went out?" remarked a Fourth avenue milliner to a customer. "Noticed that red hat, did you? Well, as a milliner and a person whose business it is to study the different characteristics of women I have watched her for two years. It has been a kind of study of the 'evolutions of a widow.'

"Two years ago she came to me, recently bereaved, and had me make her a hat or deepest black. She was broken hearted and declared she would never again take an interest in the pretty things that women like to wear. A year ago she came again.

690 hat. It just shows what time will do in lifting up a heart bowed down."— Louisville Times.

The Releaser.

If he hadn't been a dreadful bore and the hour wasn't so late it is quite possible the lovely girl would have refrained from the exercise of a strategic scheme, says the Cleveland Plain

"Hark!" she whispered as he paused in the midst of a long winded de-scription of his camping outfit. "What is it?" he whispered in return.

She smiled reassuringly.

"It's only papa. He must be oiling the releaser."

"And what is the releaser?"
"It's one of papa's ingenious schemes. Every night, at exactly 11 o'clock, he pulls up a brass chain that releases our brindle bull pup from his annex adjoining the kitchen; that's all.'

And she laughed merrily. The caller glanced at the clock on the mantel.

"I find I must go," he said in a slightly hurried manner. "And good night."

Punishment For Perjury.

Perjury is a crime more severely punished in Germany than in any other country in the world. Even an apparently trivial misstatement under oath carries a sentence of ten years in prison. Excepting murder, there are few crimes that carry as heavy a pen-alty as perjury. The German theory is that the entire system of jurispru-dence rests on the respect for an oath administered under the forms of law and that this must be strictly guarded in order to secure the punishment of other crimes and insure justice in civil cases. Germany stands at one extreme and the United States at the other. Fewer people are punished in the United States for false swearing in the witness box than in any other country.-London Telegraph.
