ATTEST: W. L. THOMAS, Comm'r's Clerk, Emporium, Pa., March 1st, 1910. v. 34. Will Pay Large Dividends. Land investments are secure and pay the best Land is indestructible. Land values increase on the average. People of small means cannot as a rule, buy or sell land at great advantage. The greatest profits are made by acting together as a company. To buy acres at wholesale price and then to plot same into town or city lots, is the way to make money. A great factor in the degree of success of such a scheme is to have a strong company, run by experienced, townable men, built up in town or city and colonies all around it. Such a concern is the Interstate and Land Company, P. O. Box 295, Denver, Colorado. You will get big dividends by buying shares at one dollar each. Send your money at once to the above address, by post office or express order or by bank draft, for as many shares as you want. 34.

EASTER'S DATE. Some Diverting Incidents of the Great Church Controversy. "The festival of Easter is to be celebrated on the Sunday following the first full moon after the beginning of spring. Therefore if the moon becomes full upon the day on which spring begins the Sunday after the next full moon is of course indicated by the direction of the council as Easter day. And if the moon becomes full on a Sunday the next Sunday similarly must be Easter day. The history of this controversy respecting the date of Easter, which the Nicene council happily settled, includes a number of diverting anecdotes based upon the disinclination of different people to accept even the council's rulings. A story is told of a European of prominence who celebrated Easter every year on the very same day of which his wife celebrated Palm Sunday. Another story is told of a devout old couple in Germany who refused to abide by a new church decree relative to Easter. The decree altered the date and on the day on which they had always attended the Easter services the old people walked from their home to the church. They found the church closed and no Easter service in progress. The old gentleman beat upon the door with his stout stick and demanded admittance, and when there was no response from the uninhabited church the old people retraced their steps to celebrate Easter at home.

EASTER PLACES. Not an Unfamiliar Name to Those Who Travel. "Wunst," said the sailor, refilling his glass, "I spent Easter on Easter Island. Jolly little place—southern Pacific—palm and all that—gals as yaller and inspiring as this here egg nog. "Another time I camped on Easter Sunday at the foot of Easter hill, in the New Hebrides. That's a hill what ain't never been climbed. All we had to eat and drink that day was rice and water. "There's two English villages in Essex, one called High Easter and the other called Good Easter, that I visited one Easter holiday out of curiosity. But I didn't see nothing. "Easter hole, in southern Patagonia, is a natural well what ain't got no bottom, the natives say. The water in it rises and falls with the tide. "But the most melancholy place I ever put in an Easter at was in Easter canyon, in Arizona. We was prospecting there, me and Carlos Riberia. It's a wonder we didn't see ghosts, for at Easter canyon a party of immigrants died of starvation on Easter Sunday, leaving a heartbroken chalk diary on the rocks. Easter Myths and Customs. Many and varied are the superstitions, ideas and customs which cluster around Easter. One of the best known is that it is unlucky to neglect the washing of new attire on Easter day. This widely prevalent custom originated, it is said, with the young people of Yorkshire, England, who never fail to provide for themselves some new article of dress or of personal adornment, firmly believing that unless they do the crakes or rooks will avenge the neglect by damaging their clothing. It is held to be a good omen if one sees a lamb the first thing on Easter morning. The lamb, it is to be noted, should be standing erect and looking toward one to augur the most felicitous results. The weather on Easter day is also specially significant. This is a point for forecasters. If the sun blazes out on Easter day, that is very good augury, for it is sure to shine again on Whitsunday in May. An old couplet tells us that— A good deal of rain on Easter day Gives a good crop of grass, but little good hay. The direction from which the wind blows should also be carefully noted. If the wind is in the east it is said that there is great virtue in the water used on Easter day. A curious omen connected with Easter day is that on that day the sun could be seen to dance, a superstition which has readily been traced to heathen origin. It was the custom during the ancient pagan spring festivals, of which the modern Easter is an adaptation, for the sun worshippers who held these ceremonies to dance at a festival in honor of the sun after the vernal equinox.—Leslie's Weekly.

Easter Jewelry. It's the same kind you see at the jeweler's at other seasons, but it's made apropos by being tied with white and purple ribbon to dainty cards. A gold plated hatpin conveys the Easter wishes of "Bre'r Rabbit" whose clever pen and ink portrait appears on the attached card. A rabbit's foot charm with silver mounting is most appropriate, tied to an Easter lily card. Pretty little silver pencil cases, with a rabbit in relief on the top, swing on a silver chain from a card. Silver bookmarks, bracelets, brooches, button hooks, shoe horns and necklaces are all dressed in this Easter fashion with cards and ribbons.

Easter Morning. With air demure and downcast eyes The alto takes her place. And as the anthem sweet she sings Of charity and grace Her look of rapt beatitude To an exultant grin Is changed, and higher, higher still Is raised her "Hallelujah" chin. "Can it be fervor for the theme?" "Ah, no, it's just to state: She sees the tag on her neighbor's coat! It reads: "Easter ninety-eight!" —Puck

EASTER IN PRISON. EASTER SUNDAY in a prison is welcomed as one of the great days of the year, when there is a little extra indulgence in the way of eating and amusement and some relaxation in the usual discipline. The prison officials endeavor as far as possible to make the day a little different from the usual Sunday, though, with the best intentions, they cannot do much. Easter Sunday begins for the prisoners at about half past 7, when the great prison bell rings and the guards unlock the cell doors. Away down the corridor you hear the stamp, stamp, as of an advancing giant. Line after line of black and gray striped figures march out on their way to breakfast. The messroom, with its rows of desk-like tables, capable of seating more than a thousand men, looks like an immense schoolroom. At the end of each table is a great pile of bread cut in thick slices, beside which stands a keeper. Each man on taking his seat finds before him a tin plate containing his breakfast, a pint of coffee, a slice of bread and a knife and fork. If he wants more bread he holds up his right hand and the guard at the end of the table passes it to him. By holding up his plate or cup he can get more coffee or whatever there may be for breakfast. Waste is avoided, but no man need go away from the table unsatisfied. After a busy quarter of an hour the keeper in charge of the first company knocks on the table, and the men in his charge, some fifty or sixty, rise at once and form into line, each carrying his knife and fork in his hand. The keeper takes his station at the door, and as each man passes out he must deposit his knife and fork in the box provided for that purpose. If the day is fine the men are marched around the yard for half an hour, still keeping their formation, and a strange sight it is to see the long lines of men marching in and out around the building in endless procession. Exercises over, away they march to the chapel, which, owing to the efforts of the chaplain and his friends, is decorated with flowers and plants disposed so as to hide as much as possible the tattered bars and other suggestive items. Each man as he enters receives a printed program of the services, containing also the hymns to be sung by the congregation. For weeks previously the prison choir has been practicing Easter music, and, as a rule, the prison choir is quite competent to give as good a choral service as those of a great many city churches, there being no lack of well trained voices, even a male soprano voice being far from unusual. The religious services are brief, most of the time being taken up by the choir. The whole is over in about an hour and a half. Then comes the march back to the cells, each man receiving as he passes the mess room a tin containing his afternoon meal, which consists of three hard boiled eggs, some cold potatoes and as much bread as he cares to take. Taking his place at the lever which locks every door on that gallery, the keeper waits until each man is in his place. At the signal, each door is closed with a bang, snap goes the lever, and fifty doors are securely locked. Then comes the count. Each man stands behind his door, which, being formed of iron bars, permits him to be plainly seen, and as the keeper knocks with his key in passing answers "Here." A second keeper repeats the count, and then for the present each man is left to the enjoyment of his own company. At 12 o'clock the prison wakes up again a little as the mess room waiters pass from door to door with great cans of boiling coffee. Soon all is quiet again, and little can be heard as the afternoon drags along except the soft footfall of the felt shoe patrol or an impatient sigh from a wretched prisoner. At 5 o'clock fresh water is served out to each man, and his lamp is lighted. Slowly the time drags along until 9 o'clock, when at the striking of the prison gong all lights are put out. The great prison is soon as quiet as a city of the dead, and Easter Sunday has passed.—New York Evening Post.
