Sudden Death of Calvin H. M'Cauley.

Funeral at Ridgway Monday Very Largely Attended.

The sudden death of Calvin H. M'-Cauley, of Ridgway, last Friday was a great shock to his many friends throughout the country.

We copy the following correct ac count from the Ridgway Daily Record of last Friday :

Calvin Hudson M'Cauley, senior member of the law firm of M'Cauley & Whitmore, one of the most widely known lawyers in the State, died at his home in Ridgway this morning, a few minutes before eight o'clock, after a brief illness due to an attack of pneumonia. But comparatively few peo ple knew that he was even ill and the announcement of his death came as a great shock to the community and to his friends everywhere. He returned from Florida recently suffering with a cold, but thought nothing of it. He was attending to business as usual last week and assisted in trying an impor-tant case in court, but left his office between 4 and 5 o'clock Friday afternoon, saying that he did not feel well and would go home and lie down. His illness dates from that time, but did not assume a serious aspect until yesterday, when there came a decided change for the worse, culminating in death this morning.

Mr. M'Cauley was born in Fox township, Elk county, July 10, 1850, and was therefore 59 years old. He started in life without any of those advantages which wealth afford, working on tages which wealth afford, working on the farm and in the mills and driving team, as did the average country boy in those days. He acquired the rudiments of a common education, and later spent a year at the high school in Painsville, Ohio, and for a year attended the University at Lewisburg, this State. He taught school, studied law, and on August 7, 1872, was admitted to the bar, since which time he has devoted his entire time to the practice of his profession, in which he achieved distinction such as is attainachieved distinction such as is attain-achieved distinction such as is attained by few.

Mr. M'Cauley was married December 25, 1871, at Olean, N. Y., to Miss Juliette A. M'Gibbony, of that place, who survives him; he is also survived by three children, Ruby V., now Mrs. John S. Elliott, of New York city; Calvin H. M'Cauley, of Williamsport, and Miss Katherine Hyde M'Cauley, at home.

He was a baptised member of the Episcopal Church, and after the New Grace Church was built, gave it some Grace Church was built, gave it some handsome gifts, among them an Angol Lectern, or Bible stand, carved by the Oberammergau Passion Play people, and the handsome altar rails now in place. The funeral will be held Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the family residence on Main street.

Mr. M'Cauley was a man who devoted his whole life to his profession, which, with his marked talent and adaptability, accounted in a large measure for his great success. He had not much time for social life and did not belong, as far as we know, to any of the secret societies. He took a great deal of pride in his record as a member of the borough council of Ridgway, just after the borough was organized in 1881, and he always had the best interests of the town a good deal more at heart than his busy life would lead many to think. He was a lover of art, as is planty illustrated by the funi many to think. He was a lover of art, as is plainly illustrated by the furnishings of his splendid home in this place. Mr. M'Cauley was a most hospitable man and enjoyed entertaining his friends on occasions in his home in his friends on occasions in his home in this place. He was devoted to his family and frequently took them abroad on his vacation trips, especially his wife and youngest daughter, Miss Katherine. "Many of the new people do not know Mr. M'Cauley well because he had not much time in recent years to mingle with the people, and his professional duties took him out of town a great deal of the time, but to those who knew him best, he was a very pleasant and social gentleman, and his friends were unfalteringly devoted to him. His sad and untimely death has cast a gloom over the timely death has cast a gloom over the whole community. The death of such a man is always a great calamity.

THE FUNERAL, The funeral took place last Monday afternoon from the handsome residence of the deceased, the attendance being very large from all parts of the country. Seldom have we seen such a large gathering of friends, from every walk of life, gather to pay respect to a deceased friend. Large delegations from Rochester, N. Y., New York city, St. Marys, DuBois, Punxsutawney, Sterling Run, Smeth-port, Ralston, Sheffield, Emporium, Lock Haven, Brookville, Williamssport, Costello, Pittsburg, Butler, Indiana, Kane, Warren, Bradford and Renovo, including every section of Elk county.

The services at the residence were conducted by Rev. R. S. Radeliffe, rector of Episcopal Church, assisted by Rev. Harvey, of Phelps, N. Y., his former Rector. The services were short and simple. Miss Maud Harris, sang, "Lead Kindly Light." The remains were placed in the family maussoleum, Pine Grove cemetery, the remains being escorted by the large force of employees in Elk lanning Company's office. The floral offerings were in very great abundance, it requiring three automobiles to convey them to the cemetery. Immediately after the services, at the residence, the Bar Association, met at the court house. Judge Harry Alvan Hall presiding, as president of the Association, spoke feelingly of the deceased member. He was followed by many other members.

JUDGE B. W. GREEN'S TRIBUTE. Judge Green spoke for Cameron County Bar, as follows:

"This bright spring day, when life seems so sweet and so dear in the hearts of us all, it is with sadness that we meet to pay a last tribute to one of the brighest members of the legal profession in this part of the State. A man who was in the prime of life, and who enjoyed the springtime of life as well as any of us. He had as bright prospects as any man, and yet, although he has had years of service in the practice, as has been remarked by the ho norable chairman of this meeting he was yet a young man, in the prime of life, under 60 years of age. Few men in the practice of our profession have reached a higher pinnacle of fame than Calvin H. M'Cauley. I have known him, as many of you have, since he was admitted to the Bar-in fact, we were admitted in the same year-and, therefore being in adjoining counties, and upon the same line of professional work, it became my privilege and honor to become closely associated with him and to know him well. No man has risen to a higher pinnacle in the country, or in this whole part of the Commonwealth. with the same opportunities, as Calvin H. M'Cauley. He enjoyed the respect of the business community. He directed large affairs in this county and throughout the Commonwealth, and he directed them well. No man who ever had business relations with him could rise up here today and speak aught against him, not only in business integrity, but in his professional courtesies-everything that goes to make up one of the noblest professions that is followed by men. If I had the time and the ability to pay that respect to his departed memory it deserves, I would. We, as brothers. of the Bar of Northwestern Pennsylvania are better today for having known Calvin H. M'Cauley. No man could be associated with him, as we have been, without being better able to perform the duties of life. We drop a flower upon his grave with the most profound and sad regret."

A WINNING TRICK.

He Lost All His Bets and Made Money by Doing So.

The captain of one rather old and slow steamer of years ago, finding that he would have to be a long time to China before he received a full carge of tea and would have probably to return in ballast, began, to every one astonishment, to say that, owing to the repairs that had been done to hi engines, he hoped to make a racing passage back to England. Then, still more to the astonishment of the captains of the fast steamers and the world at large, he commenced to back himself to make the fastest passage in such very considerable sums of money did he wager that people began to think there was something in almost entirely to his ship, arguing that as the captain stood to lose £250 the repairs to his steamer's engines had probably put him in a position to bet almost on a certainty.

Of course the steamer, whose greatest speed was eight knots an hour, arrived in England weeks after the others, and the captain lost £250, but instead of having to lie in China waiting his chance of cargo coming in from the interior, a probable delay of weeks, he had cleared in a few days after his bets became known to the public with a full ship, thus recouping to his owners, who, of course, paid his betting losses, a considerable number of thousands of pounds profit.-Blackwood's Magazine.

A DANGEROUS TRAITOR.

The Result of Pechantre's Plot to Kill the King.

Probably no well meaning poet was ever more taken by surprise than was M. Pechantre, a gentle and mild mannered French dramatist of the seven teenth century, who was one day arrested for high treason as he peacefully eating his dinner at a village inn.
The landlord of the inn where he was in the habit of dining discovered on a table a piece of paper on which were written some unintelligible phrases and below in a plain, bold hand, "Here I will kill the king."

The landlord consulted with the chief of police. Clearly this clew to a conperson who had left the paper had atair and gleaming eye. That man was Pechantre.

The chief of police instructed the landlord to send for him the next time the conspirator came to dinner.

When Pechantre was shown the evidence of his guilt be forgot the awful charge against him and exclaimed:

Well, I am glad to see that paper I have looked everywhere for it. is part of a tragedy 1 am writing. is the climax of my best scene, where Nero is to be killed. It comes in here. Let me read it to you." And he took a thick manuscript from his pocket.

"Monsieur, you may finish your din ner and your tragedy in peace," said the chief of police, and he beat a hasty

She was studying mental arithmetic at school and took no pleasure in it. One day she told her mother, with much depression of spirit, that she had "failed again in mental arithmetic," and on being asked what prob-lem had proved her undoing she sorrowfully mentioned the request for the addition of "nine and four.

"And didn't you know the answer, dear?" asked her mother.

"Yes'm." said the little maid: "but, you know, we are to write the answers on our slates, and before I thought I made four marks and count ed up, 'Ten, 'leven, twelve, thirteen, and then, of course, I knew that wasn't mental, so I wrote twelve for the answer to be fair."

The Cautious Kind.

Before the customer paid his bill the hotel stenographer tore several pages out of her notebook and handed them "Only the notes of his letters," she said to the next customer. "He is one of the cautious kind. There are not many like him. About once in six months somebody comes along who keeps such a watchful eve on his correspondence that he won't even let a stenographer keep his notes. Of course it is nothing to us, and we always give them up when asked to. I don't know what the cautious folk do with them. Destroy them, maybe. Anyhow, there is no record of foolish utterances left the stenographer's books."-New York Sun.

Little Worries.

In Chesterton's "Tremendous Trifles" is this: A friend of mine who was visiting a poor woman in bereavement and casting about for some phrase of consolation that should not be either insolent or weak said at last: "I think one can live through these great sorrows and even be the better. What wears one is the little worries."

"That's quite right, mum." answered the old woman, with emphasis, "and I ought to know, seeing I've had ten of
