A Shot That Made Trouble.
An odd incident happened in the then Danish West Indies in the last century that nearly caused serious international complications. An American marksman, paying a visit to Charlotte Amalia, amused the governor by an exhibition of his skill with the rifle. Sitting on the veranda of the government house, he said that he could cut with a bullet the signal halcyons on the flagstaff of the fort and lower the Danish standard to the ground. As the lines were almost invisible in the distance the governor was willing to bet that he could not do it. The shot rang out, and the flag fell. Presently a horseman dashed up, informing the governor that some one had fired on the flag. There was great excitement. The governor, none too popular, it seems, with the military, ruined his political future by admitting that the affair was a joke in which he connived. Report being sent to Copenhagen, highly colored, of course, by the commandant, his excellency was summarily removed.

Cultivating Ginger.
Ginger is made a matter of scientific culture in Jamaica. It is propagated by cutting up small pieces of the root, and, if possible, rich, cool soil from recently cleared woods is selected for it. It is a great impoverisher of the soil and grows so luxuriantly that in a short time a little piece of root will spread so as to produce nearly a pound of new roots. The sets are planted in March or April and get to their full growth about September. The roots are dug usually in Jamaica in January or February. They are washed, exposed to the sun until thoroughly dried and packed in parcels of about a hundred pounds each. In order to dry them more rapidly they are first scalded in a little copper pot in order to destroy life, of which the roots are very tenacious. White ginger and black ginger are from the same roots, the difference arising from methods of curing. Roots for sugar preserving are dug while quite young, before the stems are more than five or six inches high.

A Luckless Word.
Superstition dies hard, at least in the north of England. On Tyneside it is reckoned highly unlucky to hear or mention the word "pig," and evil consequences can only be averted by touching cold iron. If that material is not at hand its name must be uttered aloud as the next best thing. It is no uncommon thing to see a group of sailors or workmen suddenly scatter to lay hold of iron railings, lampposts, etc., when by chance "pig" has slipped into their conversation. A stranger to the district was not long ago puzzled to see four little shoeblacks, squatted at a game of cards on their blacking box, suddenly scramble to their feet, run to some iron posts several yards away, touch them and then return and resume their game quite unconcerned. When he obtained an explanation his amusement equalled his astonishment. The origin of the superstition seems to be unknown.—London Scraps.

Uses Animals Make of Their Tails.
Horses, cows and other creatures use their tails as fly flappers. Cats, squirrels and many more twist them around their necks for comforters. The rat has raised the use of the tail to a fine art, for by its means it guides the blind and steals jelly, oil and cream out of jars and bottles. The marmoset plays as merrily with its tail as a kitten does, and the marmoset while it sleeps uses its tail as a sort of blanket. The raccoon catches crabs with its tail. Every one knows how the monkeys journey through pathless forests by swinging from tree to tree, while the fishes steer their way through the water by their tail fins. The ant eater puts up its big bushy tail for an umbrella. The vanity of the peacock is fed by the beauty of its tail.—Dumb Animals.

Exact Information.
A census enumerator was questioning a woman of indubitable Celtic extraction and had come to the division of sexes.
"How many males have you in your family?" he asked.
"Three a day, sorr, an' I git 'um meself," she replied emphatically.

What Women Are For.
"Every good woman, if I may call myself one, turns the men she cares for round her little finger, and it's the men who are worth most in life who submit most readily to the process. Do you know why God created angels? It was to whisper good thoughts to women. Do you know why he created women? It was to whisper good thoughts to men."—Inner Shrine.
