Foley's Kidney Remedy will cure any case of kidney and bladder trouble not beyond the reach of medicine. No medicine can do more. For sale by Emporium Drug Company.

Must be Above Suspicion.
Kidney and bladder ailments are so serious in their consequence, and if unchecked so often fatal that any remedy offered for their cure must be above suspicion. Foley's Kidney Pills contain no harmful drugs, and have successfully stood a long and thorough test. For sale by the Emporium Drug Co.

Hay Fever and Asthma.
Bring discomfort and misery to many people but Foley's Honey and Tar gives ease and comfort to the suffering ones. It relieves the congestion in the head and throat and is soothing and healing. None genuine but Foley's Honey and Tar in the yellow package. For sale by Emporium Drug Co.

Foley's Kidney Pills have Cured Me.
The above is a quotation from a letter written by H. M. Winkler, Evansville, Ind. "I contracted a severe case of kidney trouble. My back gave out and pained me. I seemed to have lost all strength and ambition; was bothered with dizzy spells, my head would swim and specks would float before my eyes. I took Foley's Kidney Pills regularly and am now perfectly well and feel like a new man. Foley's Kidney Pills cured me." For sale by Emporium Drug Co.

When the stomach fails to perform its functions, the bowels become deranged, the liver and kidneys congested causing numerous diseases. The stomach and liver must be restored to a healthy condition and Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets can be depended upon to do it. Easy to take and most effective. Sold by all dealers.

"Is Life Worth Saving?"
Mrs. Mollie McRaney, Prentiss, Miss., writes that she had a severe case of kidney and bladder trouble, and that four bottles of Foley's Kidney Remedy cured her sound and well. She closes her letter by saying: "I heartily recommend Foley's Kidney Remedy to any sufferer of kidney disease. It saved my life." For sale by Emporium Drug Co.

Mit Him Coming and Going.
An attorney went to a livery stable and hired a team for two or three hours and at the end of that time, in a state of absentmindedness, left the team at another livery stable, where it remained eight days. At stable No. 1 there was no worry about the team. They knew the attorney was perfectly good for the pay. They knew that if he kept the team a month the bill would be paid promptly on presentation. They presumed that he knew what he was about and concluded it was his business and not theirs. At stable No. 2 there was equal freedom from anxiety. The attorney came there, left the team and went away, saying nothing. They put the horse into a stall and "chained it down" on the office slate, knowing him to be a business man who paid cash. Discovery came at last, and the lawyer was presented with two bills, one for eight days' hire and the other for eight days' keep. He paid both bills promptly, but it cured him of being absentminded for nearly a whole month.

The Coffee Cup In Persia.
The expression "to give a cup of coffee" has in Persia a somewhat ominous significance. This is due to the fact that the coffee cup is one recognized medium for conveying poison. Some years ago the governor of Aspadana, having long been at daggers drawn with the chief of a powerful mountain tribe, determined in this way to put an end to all trouble. He professed to entertain a great degree of friendship and esteem for the chieftain and invited him to visit him at his palace. The chief unsuspectingly came, accompanied by his two young sons. For a week they were royally entertained. But at last one morning when the chief came into his host's presence he was coldly received, and an attendant soon stepped forward with a single cup of coffee in his hand, which he offered to the guest. The latter could not fail to understand that he was doomed. Preferring, however, steel to poison, he declined the cup and was thereupon, at a signal from his host, stabbed to death.

Salad of the Shoes.
Freshmen have troubles the world over. The "conscripts," as they are called at the famous Ecole Polytechnique in Paris, are subjected to an amusing initiation called the salad of shoes. The freshmen report some days before the upper class men so that they can receive their uniforms and become familiar with the routine of the school. The first morning after their tormentors return the freshmen are aroused by a demand that they throw their shoes out of the windows into the courtyard. The shoes are gathered into a heap, and kneeling in a big circle around this, the freshmen are obliged to go through some ridiculous gymnastic movements at the command of their superiors. When the study bell rings they have but a minute to appear in the class rooms, and it is a strenuous minute around that pile of shoes.

Tennyson Disturbed.
This story is told in Robert H. Sherard's book "My Friends the French." "A granddaughter of Wordsworth, being full of admiration for the young poet who was to succeed her grandfather in laureate honors, was once taken to see Mr. Tennyson by Mrs. Taylor, the wife of another poet of some distinction. Tennyson received them very badly, showing great irritation at being disturbed, and when Mrs. Taylor rallied him on his manner he said: 'Madam, I am a poor man, and as I can't afford to buy the Times I hire it from the stationer's. He charges me a penny for it, which entitles me to keep it for an hour. Why will people always select just that hour to come and call upon me?' After which he flung out of the room, leaving Mrs. Tennyson to apologize for his brusquerie."

Currency in China.
Writing from the interior of China, a traveler says: "Currency is primitive to a degree. Lump silver only is used and copper 'cash.' Coined money is not current. Even in Honan city, which is distant only two days by rail from Peking, lump silver, the same cumbersome currency that has been used for centuries, is still employed. It is cut into small pieces by hammer and chisel. Every town and village has its own weights and scales, and there is no pretense at uniformity."

The Man and the Parrot.
Exasperated Purchaser—Didn't you guarantee that this parrot would repeat every word he heard?
Bird Dealer—Certainly I did.
"But he doesn't repeat a single word."
"He repeats every word he hears, but he never hears any. He is as deaf as a post."

Life's Percentages.
It sometimes happens that a man plays an errorless game because he accepts mighty few chances. The man in the right garden is pretty sure to have a better fielding record than the shortstop.—Atchison Globe.

Outdone.
"He doted on Alice and would have married her but for her mother."
"Ah! Her mother?"
"Yes; her mother was still more attractive."

Missed Fire.
Putton-Affen—I am cavilize to the general, you know, Miss Innocent—Oh, are you really? My brother is in the military too.—Boston Transcript.

KITTERY POINT ELMS.
Each of the Giant Shade Trees Cost a Pint of Rum.
One of the most striking attractions of the old town of Kittery Point has long been her towering elms. They rise magnificently above trees of all other varieties, and in summer with their foliage encompass her quaint streets in delicious green coolness, transform the fine old place into a veritable seashore fairyland and last, but not least, enrapture the summer visitor.
For nearly two miles along the high way, which for the most part follows the shore of the harbor, these splendid specimens rear themselves at fairly regular intervals, though the ax has in times past brought some of the monarchs crashing to the earth.
The story of the circumstances attending the planting of the giants, as it has been handed down from father to son, runs as follows: "Major Thomas Cutts, one of the old town fathers, who conducted a fishing business, foreign commerce, a store and a tavern in the famous Pepperell mansion (built 1762), conceived the very commendable idea of beautifying his native town by setting out trees.
"Accordingly in 1791 he gave one Samuel Blake the contract. Samuel's remuneration was nothing more or less than a pint of rum, doubtless brought from the West Indies by one of the major's pinkies, for each tree planted. There were originally ninety of them, and they extended from the Seavey lot, near where the First Christian church now stands, to the 'top of the Point' or the shore of Spruce creek."—Kennebec Journal.

THE SPIDER'S THREAD.
Its Use by Astronomers in Their Study of the Stars.
The threads of the garden spider are fixed by astronomers in their telescopes for the purpose of giving fine lines to the field of view by which the relative positions of stars may be accurately measured.
For a century astronomers desired to make use of such lines of the greatest possible fineness and procured at first silver wire drawn out to the extreme limit of tenuity attainable with that metal. They also tried hairs one five-hundredth of an inch thick and threads of the silkworm's cocoon, which are split into two component threads, each only one two-thousandth of an inch thick. But in 1820 an English instrument maker named Troughton introduced the spider's line. This can be readily obtained a fourth of the thickness of the silkworm's thread and has also advantages in its strength and freedom from twist.
In order to obtain the thread the spider is carefully fixed on a miniature rack, and the thread, which at the moment of issue from the body is a viscid liquid, is made to adhere to a winder, by turning which the desired length of firm but elastic thread can be procured.—London Graphic.

Henley's Sufferings.
In fifty-four years of his life—he was born in 1849—W. E. Henley never knew what a day's perfect health meant. When little more than a boy he was attacked by a disease which necessitated the amputation of one foot. He was told later by the doctors that the sacrifice of the other leg was necessary were he to live. The fame of Dr. Lister had reached Henley, and, penniless and almost friendless, he determined to try Edinburgh infirmary. Thither he traveled third class in physical suffering such as few have known, and when he reached the infirmary his whole possessions amounted to a few shillings. His confidence in Lister was justified, and his leg was saved. He was and remained a cripple, but neither hopeless nor helpless. His astounding nimbleness under these conditions suggested to Robert Louis Stevenson the physical sketch of John Silver.

A Hard One.
"The self made man is splendid," said Andrew Carnegie at a dinner in Washington, "if he makes himself a mental and spiritual no less than a financial success. Too many self made men neglect the intellectual side. This sometimes—at commencements, for example—puts them at a disadvantage. I know a self made man who said at a commencement to his nephew: 'Well, Tommy, my son, what do they teach you here?' 'Latin and Greek,' the boy replied, 'and German and algebra.' 'Dear me!' cried the self made man, 'and what's the algebra for turnip?'—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Difference.
"What do you regard as the chief difference between a theorist and a practical man?"
"A theorist," replied Senator Sorghum, "studies out how a thing ought to be done, and the other fellow makes up his mind how it can be done."—Washington Star.

Out of the Ordinary.
Belle—Why do you encourage that stupid Mr. Blinks? Nellie—Why, he says things I never heard any other man say! Belle—Honestly? He proposed?—Cleveland Leader.

His Constituents.
"Ever had 'em strew flowers in your path as you returned home, senator?"
"Now, I'm satisfied not to have 'em strew banana peelings."—Pittsburg Post.

Extremes.
Mrs. A.—My husband is positively impossible. He knows nothing.
Mrs. B.—Mine is simply unobtrusive. He knows everything.—London Tit-Bits.

The Fat Woman's Ring.
The woman showed a fat finger in whose folds of flesh was imbedded a plain gold ring.
"How much will you let me have on this ring?" she said to the pawnbroker.
"I can't tell until you take it off so I can weigh it," he said.
She tugged at the ring. It wouldn't come off.
"Can't you get it off for me?" she asked.
The pawnbroker threaded a needle with strong lino thread, snipped the needle and slipped it head first under the ring toward the hand. Then he wound the long end of the thread tightly and evenly around the finger almost to the nail. That done, he took the needle and unwound the thread from the base of the finger out, and as he unwound the ring slipped off. He weighed the ring.
"Two dollars," he said.
"That won't do me any good," said the woman. "I can get $3 any place else."
He returned the ring.
"She didn't really want to pawn it," he said. "She just wanted somebody to take the ring off. A jeweler would have done it the same way, but he would have charged something."—New York Sun.

Mythical Creatures of Japan.
The Japanese believe in more mythical creatures than any other people on the globe, civilized or savage. Among them are mythical animals without any remarkable peculiarities of conformation, but gifted with supernatural attributes, such as a tiger which is said to live to be a thousand years old and to turn as white as a polar bear. They also believe in a multitude of animals distinguished mainly by their size or by the multiplication of their members. Among these are serpents 800 feet long and large enough to swallow an elephant, foxes with eight legs, monkeys with four ears, fishes with ten heads attached to one body, the flesh of which is a cure for boils. They also believe in the existence of a crane which, after it has reached the age of 600 years, has no need of any sustenance except water.

Blamed the Last One.
A man who from all appearances had dined well, but not wisely, bought a ticket at the box office of a theater where a farce was being produced in German. The man settled comfortably back in his seat, smiling at the pretty stage setting and evidently prepared to enjoy an evening of pleasant diversion. After a time he began to look worried and leaned forward in his seat.
"Strangest thing ever experienced," he muttered.
A few minutes later he left the theater. At the door the ticket taker offered him a return.
"Nope; don't want it," he said as he brushed it aside. "Guess that last drink went to my head. Can't understand a blamed thing them people a-sayin'. I'm goin' home to bed."—Philadelphia Times.

Extravagant Mourning.
Peppy's diary has this on the mourning customs of the time: On Sept. 22, 1660, when there was mourning for King Charles' brother, the Duke of Gloucester, he "bought a pair of short black stockings to wear over a pair of silk ones for mourning." Next day "came one from my father's with a black cloth coat, made of my short cloak, to walk up and down in." The problem of mourning for men must have been greater than it is now in those days, when ordinary masculine costume was less somber. On this occasion Peppy records seeing "the king in purple mourning for his brother." There is one mourning extravagance of the early eighteenth century which would scarcely commend itself—the soles of the shoes used to be blacked.—St. James' Gazette.
