Did you hear a noise like a fly?

There's no age limit on circus boys.

The best way not to get typhoid is to prevent it.

Have you joined the fly crusade? It doesn't cost anything.

Paying fines to the government as a penalty for smuggling seems a poor way to wind up a pleasure trip abroad.

Smuggling is one of those amusements which ought to be left to the ridiculously rich who do not mind expense.

Do we sufficiently appreciate those aviators who are falling from perilous heights that the rest of us may learn to fly?

Thus far, we believe, the life insurance companies are inclined to regard aviation as one of the more or less hazardous occupations.

In learning how to manage a flying machine the principal drawback is that you can't rest the machine on anything solid while you are doing it.

One consoling thought during the hot weather is that we are all free and untrammelled American citizens and we will have a bunch of men coming around telling us about it until some time in November.

The New York public schools are to experiment with folk-dancing in the streets by the children to the music of a hurdy-gurdy. The monkey ought certainly to be omitted as master of ceremonies at the inauguration of this addition to the fad curriculum.

It is just 91 years since the first steamship crossed the Atlantic ocean. It departed from Savannah, which winks and nods now while New York takes the money and the glory. The air of Savannah is heavy with languorous perfumes. The air of New York is often heavy with perfumes, too, which is not languorous, but of a sort to keep people awake.

New York suspended business while a boy sailed a dirigible balloon over City Hall park. Elsewhere throughout the country the dirigible is only a country fair sideshow nowadays.

Some real good use for the flashing electric sign has been discovered at last in New York. A squad of policemen rescued ten persons from death in a burning tenement by using the bulb sockets as a ladder. Otherwise these contrivances are chiefly beneficial to the vandals and optimists.

LABOR JOURNAL ALIVE TO THE REAL SITUATION.

Commenting on Passage of Postal Savings Bank Bill, Assertion Made That Democratic Party Cannot Be Trusted.

Newspaper readers are familiar with the bitter attacks made upon William H. Taft during his campaign for the presidency in the name of practically all of the large labor organizations. Hence the following clipping from the current issue of the Western Laborer of Omaha, the oldest labor paper in the west, is especially interesting. It is displayed in leaded black face type on the first page, covering two columns, of which the following is the opening:

"AT LAST! AT LAST!" With all our heart we congratulate President Taft and the Republican administration on the passage of the postal savings bank law. We consider it the most needed and most beneficial legislation of our time. Now the poorest, most humble, most ignorant and superstitious human beings in the country can bank his or her savings and rest assured in the thought that it is safe. That is a blessing. We don't care anything about the squabbling of the banks and politicians over the alleged 'dangerous faults' of this law. The United States, for the first time in its history, has a place for the poorer people to deposit their money where it will be absolutely safe. The people who will deposit their money in the postal banks will never know and never care about the scrap for the funds after it leaves their hands. The Democratic party lined up against this law and it will harm that party immensely. The postal savings bank law comes home closer to the big crowd of American citizens, men and women, than any legislation in recent years, and the Democratic party was against it. Shame on the Democratic party. It can explain and explain and be damned. It tried to defeat the postal savings bank law. The Democratic party cannot be trusted nationally."

New Party Talk.

It is ridiculous to believe that Theodore Roosevelt would lend his support to a new party arising out of the Republican ranks or of any other political organization, for that matter. He is a Republican first, last and for all time. Although bound by no political affiliations at the present moment, it is unreasonable to assume that the former president would desert the party that was his making, and he is certainly not going to become a part of any organization born of Republican dissensions. Despite internal troubles the Republican party is still in the ascendancy, and were it not, it is still believed that Col. Roosevelt would be more likely to lend it his rejuvenating power than to desert it. New parties of late years have not been successful in the United States. The Democratic party has tried twice and with distinct failure both times. Hearst tried it with the more radical wing of Democracy, and in 1896 conservative forces of the Democrats attempted to raise a new party on a gold standard platform in order to defeat Bryan. The foolishness of both endeavors was quickly proven. In all likelihood any new radical political organization made from the rib of Republicanism, as it were, would fail. The new party talk is not seriously taken, and to involve Roosevelt with it is nonsensical.—New Haven Palladium.

Producing Sugar at Home.

The London Times prints an article on sugar beet experiments in Great Britain, showing that sugar beet flourishes, and that there is nothing to prevent the British people from producing all the sugar they consume, excepting the lack of a protective tariff to start the industry. This is an extract from the article:

"It is surely absurd that this country should be importing all the sugar it consumes, to the value of more than $100,000,000 a year, when nearly the whole of this, we believe, could be produced at home."

No better contribution to the revival of English rural life could be made than legislation to encourage the production of sugar in that country. If the friends of a tariff gain as much at the next election as they did at the last one such a change will be brought about. But the United States ought to do very much better in the same direction. This is no good reason why this country should pay foreign nations from $50,000,000 to $100,000,000 annually for raw sugar when it can be just as well produced at home.

If We Must Take the Dose.

As usual the possibility of Democratic success at the coming fall elections is being discounted by manufacturers and business men generally. A slump is already apparent in various branches of trade, with curtailment of products consequent upon a decreased demand. The belief that "fly-up" legislation to disturb the business world is the idea of the Democrats, does not assure the country of continued good times. If we must take the necessary dose, of which most of us have an unpleasant recollection, let it come now, so that those who want a change may have their fill of it before the next presidential election.—New York Register.

When, Oh, When?

The elimination of the tariff issue from partisan politics will be a boon to the manufacturing interests of the United States.—Brooklyn Times.

Yes, yes! It will indeed be a glorious day for American labor, industry and business when the tariff issue shall be eliminated from partisan politics. That will be when there is no longer such a thing as a protectionist, no longer any free trade doctrine, no longer any importers of competitive merchandise, no longer any people with fixed incomes who want to get for their money the largest possible quantity of labor's products. Then we shall have Utopia. But when, oh, when shall we have it? About the time, we think, when the sky falls and we can catch larks.

ASKS ONLY FOR FAIR TRIAL

Republican Party Perfectly Willing to Go to the Country on Its Tariff Record.

The Boston Herald thinks that an early start is necessary "if the Republican spellbinders expect to convince the people of Massachusetts that the Payne-Aldrich bill is satisfactory and for their interests." Inasmuch as the Democrats propose to make the tariff that center of their attack, it is incumbent on the Republican party to defend its position, and it is good politics for the party to anticipate the Democratic maneuvers. While this tariff bill is by no means perfect, it probably is as good a bill as it is possible to produce under political conditions. Each congressman endeavored to protect fully the industries and producers of his district, while the two senators from each state took pains to see that the congressmen did not overlook anything. These efforts were participated in by Democrats as well as Republicans; indeed, Democratic senators and representatives proved themselves to be pretty good protectionists.

If the tariff is the cause of higher prices on the necessities, how do the Democrats explain away the fact that the Payne-Aldrich bill actually lowers the duties on most of these necessities, and in no case increases them, but does derive additional revenue for the government by increasing the tax on luxuries? This is the cold, hard proposition that the Democrats must have to face, and their only hope lies in being able to fool the voters. The Republican party asks nothing more than a verdict based on the evidence.—Springfield Union.

It is possible to condemn the whole tariff system or to condemn this tariff in detail, but the charge that under the pretense of lessening it increased the tariff burden is not sustained by the facts that are now available.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

PROOF OF FALL IN PRICES

Bureau of Statistics Shows the Reductions That Have Taken Place Recently.

The recent fall in prices in the United States is sharply illustrated by the bureau of statistics' figures covering domestic and foreign trade for the month of May, 1910, in comparison with earlier months of the current fiscal year. The bureau publishes each month a statement of the export prices of about fifty principal articles of the export trade, also the wholesale prices of certain important articles in the domestic trade. The export prices are those prevailing in the wholesale markets at the ports of exportation, since the customs regulations state that "all articles exported shall be valued at their actual cost, or the value which they may truly bear at the time of exportation in the ports of the United States from which they are exported." The domestic prices quoted by the bureau are the wholesale prices of the articles named at certain great centers, chiefly New York, as supplied to the bureau from recognized and reliable authorities.

The May export figures show materially lower prices in practically all the important articles forming the export trade.

In the domestic markets nearly all articles show lower prices in May and June, 1910, than in the corresponding period of last year. The bureau of statistics' figures of domestic prices come down to a later period than those of export prices.

Panama Canal Figures.

The figures presented are what are known as the ordinary receipts and expenditures. The Panama canal is kept separately, although having the power to issue bonds to provide funds for the continuing construction of the canal, the secretary of the treasury in the year gone advanced the funds for the Panama canal work out of the treasury, and will reimburse the treasury whenever he thinks the occasion is propitious for a canal bond issue.

The expenditures on account of the canal during the year were about $34,000,000, and if this expenditure were included in the total of the year's expenditures, the deficit would be less than $25,000,000, as compared with $118,000,000 last year.

It is stated that the advances to the postoffice department were only $8,495,000 for the fiscal year, as compared with $19,501,000 in the previous fiscal year.

In brief, the postoffice department was within eight and a half million dollars of sustaining itself. It was estimated at the beginning of the year that the postoffice department would call on the treasury for grants amounting to $16,000,000. Mr. Hitchcock cut this estimate in half.

Some Uses for Salt.

Salt water is a splendid gargle for sore throat. Salt water snuffed into the nose is a great relief for cold, catarrh and often for a headache.

Dry salt or salt water rubbed into the roots of the hair three times a week will stop falling hair.

If the chimney is burning out on a windy day throw in a handful of salt.

Salt sprinkled on carpets brightens them and keep down the dust when sweeping.

To Remove Stains.

For certain kinds of obstinate spots, such as coffee and chocolate, for instance, there is no better detergent than glyceric acid, especially for fabrics with delicate colors. Apply the glyceric acid to the spot with a sponge or otherwise, let stand a minute or so, then wash off with water or alcohol. Hot glyceric acid is even more effective than cold.

The KITCHEN CABINET

THROUGH ENVY, through malice, through hatred, Against the world, early and late, No jot of our courage abating, Our part is to work and to wait.—Alice Cary.

Early Rising.

The early risers are the ones who accomplish things in the world. To be up in the quiet, two hours before the stir and bustle of the day, gives one time to get well started for the day's work. For those who love nature, this season of the year is the time of all to get out and enjoy the trees and hills if one has them, or the sunrise and clouds, for those are the purrises of us all.

We cannot all be as ambitious as the early rising Bridget who was up so early that she had all the work done and the beds made before the family were up; but with even a few minutes a day in the quiet of the uninterrupted morning when one's mind is fresh and rested from sleep problems are easier to work out.

It is said of Victor Hugo that his greatest novels were written in just a few minutes each day before breakfast.

It is amazing the amount of work that may be accomplished in a few moments of concentrated thought. If we wish to do anything very much we will find time to do it. The piece of sewing, the letters that should be written and many things about the house can be done without disturbing the other members who have not yet risen.

There are many things about cooking and baking that take much time that may be prepared before hand. Pastry is much better to be made and chilled before baking. One may prepare the flour, butter and lard with the salt, put into the ice chest and take enough for a crust, adding the water; this will keep indefinitely if kept cold.

Such step savers take time to get ready, but save time when it is often very pressing. Fruit may be prepared for the day, vegetables got ready, the cold dessert made and many things which may lighten the day's labor and thus make a smooth running, unhurried home.

Put in the hook, sew on that button, hem that frayed skirt before putting the clothes away, then they will be ready to put on. One is apt to put a garment away without attending to the bit of mending and forget it until it is wanted to wear. Constant vigilance is the price of being always neat and in order, but it is a price worth paying.

HAVE EASE, have health, And spirits light as air, And more than wisdom, more than wealth, A merry heart that laughs at care."

Reminders for the Housekeeper.

Fish may be scalded much easier by first dipping them in boiling water.

A tablespoonful of turpentine boiled with the clothes will add greatly to the whitening process.

A good agency for keeping the air of the cellar sweet and wholesome is white wash made of good lime and water. Adding glue to it is only a damage, as it furnishes an organic matter which putrefies and is most unpleasant.

Charcoal is recommended as an absorber of gases in the milk room or refrigerator. Keep it there continually in a powdered state, renewing occasionally, especially in hot weather when unwholesome odors are likely to affect milk and butter.

Clear boiling water poured through tea stains will remove them.

HARD TO PLEASE Regarding the Morning Cup.

"Oh how hard it was to part with coffee, but the continued trouble with constipation and belching was such that I finally brought myself to leave it off."

"Then the question was, what should we use for the morning drink? Tea was worse for us than coffee; chocolate and cocoa were soon tired of; milk was not liked very well, and hot water we could not endure."

"About two years ago we struck upon Postum and have never been without it since."

"We have seven children. Our baby now eighteen months old would not take milk, so we tried Postum and found she liked it and it agreed with her perfectly. She is today, and has been, one of the healthiest babies in the State."

"I use about two-thirds Postum and one-third milk and a teaspoon of sugar, and put it into her bottle. If you could have seen her eyes sparkle and hear her say 'good' today when I gave it to her, you would believe me that she likes it."

"I am writing this letter because I want to tell you how much good Postum has done us, but if you know how I shrink from publicity, you would not publish this letter, at least not over my name."

Gilbert—No, thank you. It's the woods for mine this year.

Alfred—Don't like the shore, eh?

Gilbert—Oh, I like it well enough, but it's too risky. I passed my vacation there last year and had several narrow escapes.

Alfred—From drowning?

Gilbert—No; summer girls. Seven of them proposed to me.

"It was a good dinner, and at its end a pretty maid servant entered with a superb dessert."

"Dessert, sergeant?" she said to the stalwart young soldier at the head of the table.

"Desert?" the sergeant answered. "When I can get eats like this for nothin'? Nixie! Not me!"
