Will Not Work Again.

The Democratic assault upon the recent tariff act is a vivid reminder of what occurred after the passage of the McKinley tariff law in the second year of the Harrison administration. That law was so persistently and unscrupulously misrepresented that people were led to believe the most of their ills and misfortunes were due to it, says Philadelphia Press.

The country was clearly deceived and one month after the passage of the act it elected an overwhelming Democratic majority to the House of Representatives, and two years later the Democrats secured the Presidency and both houses of Congress. When followed this was natural enough. It was not necessary to wait for a revision of the tariff by its enemies. The very menace of Democratic control in both executive and legislative departments of the National Government was sufficient to halt the industries of the country, depress business, stop investment and throw hundreds of thousands out of employment. It was a condition from which there was no recovery while Democratic administration continued, and which was aggravated by the enactment of a Democratic tariff law.

There was no recovery until upon a reaction the author as the maligned McKinley tariff was himself elected President with the support of a Republican Congress. The Democratic tariff was promptly superseded by the Dingley tariff, embodying the Republican principles of protection, and under that tariff the country prospered for more than a dozen years as it had never prospered before. Since that time the Democrats have not had the Presidency, nor have they had control of either house of Congress. The people, whose confidence has been abused, amazingly increased Republican majorities in Republican States and districts, and made Republican majorities in places where they had been unheard of before.

That lesson cannot have been forgotten, through the enemies of protection appear to believe it has. They are employing now against the new tariff law the same tactics used against the McKinley act. It is assailed with misrepresentation; it is falsely charged with responsibility for the higher prices of articles on which the duty has not been changed and on some of which the duties were reduced. If their assertions are not made ignorantly they are made with a presumption of popular ignorance which cannot be justified.

It is inconceivable, that such obvious misrepresentations can delude the people into again electing a Democratic Congress with its menace to industrial and business activity. One experience of this kind within the memory of the present generation should be, and doubtless is, warning enough.

Butter and Butter Substitutes.

The great majority of people eat butter and much prefer it to any of the substitutes which have been put on the market. However, a great many people must use a substitute on account of the high prices which prevail during certain months of the year.

Oleomargarine is the most common substitute for butter and millions of pounds of this product are consumed each year. The difference in cost of production between oleomargarine and butter is so great that when butter is retailed at forty cents a pound, oleomargarine may be retailed at twenty cents at as great a profit to the dealer.

The person who chooses to purchase the substitute should be allowed to do so and he should be required to pay only the price of the substitute. The difference in price between the genuine product and the substitute is so great that the dealers are tempted to sell the latter for the former. Only by requiring that the consumers may differentiate between the two articles can honest traffic in the substitute be insured.

This was contemplated by Congress when the present internal revenue tax of ten cents a pound was levied upon "artificially colored oleomargarine." Many people think that all oleomargarine is taxed ten cents a pound. This is not a fact. Oleomargarine which is "artificially colored" so that the consumer cannot distinguish it from butter is the only oleomargarine that is thus taxed. When it is put upon the market in its natural color it is only taxed one-fourth of one cent per pound.

It is only when the product is made to look like butter so that it may be fraudulently sold as butter that a burdensome tax is imposed upon it. The imposition of the tax is not to suppress the sale of oleomargarine or to make it more expensive to the consumer, but to prevent fraud in its sale.

CUSH.

WILLIAM EDWARD CUSH, died at the family home at Gardeau last Monday morning about 10:30 o'clock, from the effects of a stroke of paralysis received last Friday morning. Deceased was born in Ireland 82 years ago and came to American when he was a young man. He settled in Virginia where he was married 52 years ago, in Norfolk. Shortly after the birth of the eldest son Frank, the family removed to Emporium, this being about fifty years ago and since that this much respected family have been residents of Emporium and vicinity. Mr. Cush was employed on the Pennsylvania railroad and it was the construction of the division from Renovo to Emporium that brought him to this part of the state. Eight children were born to this union, four of whom, with the aged wife, survive the husband and father. Mrs. Cush is prostrated with her great grief, this being the second time within two weeks she has been called upon to part with her loved ones, a daughter, the late Mrs. Chas. J. Howard, having died just two weeks ago. The surviving children are Mrs. Sprung, of Denver, Colo., Edward, of Pittsburgh, Pa., Mrs. W. B. Thompson, of this place and Norman at home. Deceased was well liked by all as he was always an upright gentleman in all his dealings and his word was as good as his note. He was thoroughly dependable in every thing. The remains of this venerable gentleman were removed from his late home to the residence of his daughter, Mrs. W. B. Thompson, North Maple street, from which place the funeral was held on Wednesday afternoon at three o'clock. The Rev. R. H. Bent, pastor of the Presbyterian Church officiated and interment was made in the Newton-Wiley Cemetery beside the remains of his daughter Mrs. Knight, who died several years ago. The funeral services were very largely attended, showing the high mark of esteem in which deceased was held. This sorely afflicted family have the sincere sympathy of the entire community, having passed through these two sad scenes so recently. Only one the old land marks of Emporium and vicinity are passing away, and the dear ones left to mourn their demise can be comforted that they have fought the good fight and have gained their reward and now rest from their labors.

Rail Road News.

The increasing demand for greater safety and facility in railroad operation has caused the Pennsylvania Railroad to institute a new plan of training men to maintain and operate its signals. Accordingly, there have just been appointed four Signal apprentices; Jacob Bright, graduate of Lehigh 1910. L. J. Phillips, graduate of Sheffield Scientific School, Yale 1910. A. W. Fisher, 1910 graduate of Pennsylvania State College, and A. H. Tasker, graduate of Yale, 1910, Sheffield Scientific School.

The different divisions of the Lines East of Pittsburgh have started signal schools where experienced signalmen give instruction to the division signal employees in regard to the proper operation and maintenance of the different signal and interlocking appliances.

The importance of this step is indicated by the fact that, whereas, in 1902 there were but 7,891 interlocking functions in operation on the Lines East of Pittsburgh, in 1908 this number was 20,725—having just about tripled in a period of six years. These 20,835 functions are operated by 8,792 levers. A total of 12,408 signals are in service, covering 3,385 miles of road, or over 70 per cent of mileage.

Signal apprentices will serve a three years course. The first year will be spent on the mechanical end of the work with the repair gangs, the second year in the office of the Supervisor of Signals, and the third year on outside work on electric and electro-pneumatic appliances. They will report to the Supervisor of Signals while taking this course.

The next place open to these men in the position of Assistant Signal Inspector in the Signal Engineer's Office. After attaining this they will be considered in line of appointment to the following positions: Assistant Supervisor of Signals, Supervisor of Signals, Inspector, Assistant Signal Engineer, and Signal Engineer.
