John K. Tener.

A mass of stuff has been printed about the Republican candidate, John K. Tener, by a sensational journal, to which the candidate has made answer. But in spite of the innuendoes and the very evident attempt to accomplish results by insinuation, the journal in question has not once made a direct charge of personal dishonesty. Mr. Tener's personal honesty has never been questioned by the sensational newspaper, says Philadelphia Inquirer. Not a single dishonest dollar has been traced to his possession. When the mess simmers down it is found that the most serious charge brought against Mr. Tener is that, before connecting himself with a certain corporation or company, he relied more upon the word of men whom he believed to be reputable and upon the presence as directors of men of unimpeachable honesty than he did upon a personal examination of the assets. He was with the company but a short time, having handed in his resignation because he could not give attention to its affairs.

The most that can be urged against Mr. Tener as an unfit candidate is that he did not make a personal examination. But as an offset to that argument is the fact that he so quickly left the company. On the other hand, it may well be argued that Mr. Tener has proved his business qualities by carrying on, as its president, a national bank in his own town of Charleroi and making of it a pronounced financial and business success; that as secretary and treasurer of a successful savings bank and trust company he has again shown his ability. In his own home, where he comes into direct business relations with his neighbors, his honesty and his capability are everywhere acknowledged.

There are three prominent candidates before the people. One of them is State Senator Grim, the nominee of the Democratic State Convention. There is another, Mr. Berry, who, failing to secure the Democratic nomination in a regular way, summoned together a few followers and placed himself at the head of a Bolting Democratic Party. Mr. Berry appeals among the Democrats, especially to the Bryan wing. The third candidate is John K. Tener, and between these three the voters of Pennsylvania must make their choice.

This is a great Republican State. Throughout the Nation agitation has aroused a fierce conflict, largely, almost wholly, for that matter, on account of the recent tariff legislation. It was precisely so when, following the passage of the McKinley tariff bill, the agitators assailed that measure. Very much the same fight was conducted in Pennsylvania in the year 1890 as now. The Republican party was defeated. Triumphant Democracy rode rough shod over everything two years later, and we had a Democratic President and the Wilson tariff, with results that were disastrous. Now Republicans are facing almost an exact parallel situation. They are asked to desert their party, as they were then, and take up with a Democratic Berry or a Democratic Grim. They subsequently regretted in sackcloth and ashes the turning over of Pennsylvania to the Democrats in 1890. They would just as surely repent the defeat of Tener in Pennsylvania should they bring it about next week.

Nor is there any reason from a local standpoint why Tener should not be elected. The Republican Party has given a remarkable demonstration of honesty and ability through the administration of its present Governor, Edwin S. Stuart. To a continuance of the same high ideals Mr. Tener stands pledged, and Governor Stuart is on the stump to give his opinion that Mr. Tener means to do precisely what he promises and to advise in all sincerity the election of the full Republican ticket.

Where Governor Stuart leads any Republican may follow with every confidence that he is doing the right thing.

Mr. Tener in his speeches gives evidence of an appreciation of the high duties of office. He is sound on the questions of the day, both of local and general importance. Mr. Berry, on the contrary, has devoted himself principally to detailing his grievances as an unsuccessful applicant to the Democratic leaders at the Allentown convention. He has been a Prohibitionist one day, only to betray the party the next. He has advocated local option, only to make such an impression upon various saloon delegates at Allentown as to bring them to his support. His relations when State Treasurer with the dictator of the Democratic Party, Colonel Guffey, were such as to enable him to apply to Guffey for a considerable loan, now long overdue. It may be that he needs the emoluments of the office of Governor to enable him to pay off that loan, but we submit that ambition is not one that should appeal to the voters of Pennsylvania.

The Republican who leaves his party this year, whether it be in New York or New Jersey or Ohio or Massachusetts or Pennsylvania, is playing with fire.

The Why of The Rye

"If there is a Reason" this is the Reason why. The men who built the pyramids were the men whose food was Rye, ancient "pulse"—modern Rye. The why and wherefore of their strength has been the amazed wonder of the world. From the ancient Egyptians to the Romans, from the Romans to the Anglo-Saxon, from the Anglo-Saxon to the Northern peasantry of Europe, this food has been passed on and down the centuries. It is to be had now at
