CIGERO, XANHIPPE, BEINY ANN, AND THE REST OF THE FAMILY. -- We fell in ine Rest of the Fatther. - We fell in during a chance journey of ours, a few months ago, with an old Kansas man, who had moved his numerous family from "Varmount" to the Western wilds. It being late, we tarried with him all night. We were surprised at the progeny which he owned. One was named Demosthenes, another Cicero, another Pericles, another Aristophanes, another Euripedes, another Phidias, and another Praxitiles. Still monther was named Appello Belvidirus. another was named Appollo Belvidirus and he, as he told us, was the "humbles one of the lot," and sure enough, he was a scraggy-looking specimen. These were the boys. The girls came in with such names as Aspasis, Phryne, Melpomene, Xantippe, Massalina, Cleopatra, Agrippi-na, and the last one was named Betsy And. We asked the old man why he ened to give the children such unucual names, and indeed we were astonished at the extent of what seemed to be his classical learning. He informed us that it happened like this : A showman came along with wax figures on exhibition, and the names of the figures were so "nice" that he "writ them down, and named his children according to the list afterwards." "But, how came it," we inquired, "that you named one of your girls Betsy Ann ?" "Well," he replied, "the wax figures run out, and I had to fall back and do the best I could out of my own head." PETER JAMESON, while attending a camp meeting near Pontiac, at a time when the territory of Michigan was com-prised of two circuits, the reverend, posessing quite as much zeal as physical drength, late at night sought in vain in the preachers' tent for a place to lay his mortal remains to rest. Slightly piqued that no place had been reserved for him, having borne the burden and heat of the day, the reverend had recourse to strata-gem. Jameson called upon a brother to pray, slid off the log, and retiring to the vacant tent, appropriated the best place and most blankets, and quietly resigned himself to lence and moditation. THE boarders in a fashionable house were assembled in the public parlor one ening, when a rather antiquated maiden ady, who never seemed to have any employment but admiring her jewelry and dreases, lisped out the remark that she loved a rainy day, and always availed herself of it to arrange her drawers. "So do I," growled out an 'old sea captain. "I overhaul my drawers, and shirts too, sometimes, and sew on a button or a string where it is needed." Mademoiselle did not faint ; but there was an angry rustle of silks as she swept out of the room, leaving all to exchange a suppressed titter for a good, hearty laugh. BANK NOTICES. D. T.
