

CAMBRIA FREEMAN.

EBENSBURG, PA. THURSDAY, DEC. 5, 1867.

Congress and the President.

A few months ago the Impeachment Committee of Congress decided that no sufficient evidence was laid before them to warrant them in presenting articles of impeachment against the President.

The reason of this is obvious--Madness by defeat, Radicalism is determined to make the most of its power by impeaching the President, whose course has been just sustained by the people.

My fellow passengers did not seem in the least disconcerted, but were quietly engaged in poring over the morning papers. I lost time by not walking; they saved their boots and clothes from the filth of the street, and got the levs of the day.

I amused myself by scanning the immense crowd. Every nationality--every section--every age, sex, rank, color and condition--was represented in the multitude.

Two of the Radical members of the Committee repudiated the act of their brethren, whom they charge with having no reasons for the act but political ones, and that the only pretext is because he left his party.

Thus, instead of providing a cvenry for the people--instead of taking measures to relieve the people from the onerous burdens of taxation now crushing them to the earth--we have the Rump Congress engaged in an attempt, as wicked as it is vain, to risk the very existence of this government by making an effort to degrade a Chief Magistrate whom they elected themselves, and against whom they regarded it as treason to utter a word of disapprobation four years ago.

WHAT CANDOR!

The Alleglian, in another labored attempt to bolster upon Puritanism, exclaims exultingly that but one witch was burned by them in New England. Of course this conveys, as it was intended by the quibbler who wrote it to convey, that only one person had been executed as a witch.

In order to enlighten their readers we give the records of history, as taken from "The American Cyclopaedia" (published by Radicals) an authentic account of the Salem Witchcraft.

In 1688 the children of John Goodwin, a citizen of Boston, were believed to be bewitched; and after some investigation of the case by the Rev. Cotton Mather, they accused an old half-witted Irish woman of being the witching them, and she was hanged. In 1692 three children of the Rev. Mr. Parris, a minister of Danvers, (then a part of Salem,) complained of being tortured by a witch, and accused an Indian woman named Tituba, who had tried to relieve them by some of her Indian incantations, of being the witch. Tituba was imprisoned, and soon they accused two other friendless old women, one crazy and the other friendless, of being also witches.

That the personal popularity of the Colonel is very great cannot be denied--Whether it will be sufficient to bring him forward with enough prominence to secure him a position in the Presidential "ring," remains to be seen.

Awful Disclosures.

Speaking of the communication of Mr. A. D. Criste, published by us as a couple of weeks ago, the Alleglian says: "His charges are broad, bold, and defiant; and if true, exhibit a condition of affairs which will astonish the people of the county not a little."

A MAMMOTH CAVE.

The Alleglian, after perpetrating three long, tiresome articles in defence of Puritanism, in its last number admits that "There is no dispute, and has been none, about the follies and uncivil acts of these men"--the Puritans. Then why do you champion them?

Another Hinkinson outrage by a Negro.--The Pittsburgh Commercial of Saturday publishes the following special dispatch, dated "Pierceton, Ind., Nov. 29, 1867":

An outrage was committed between twelve and one o'clock to-day, on the person of Mrs. J. S. Baker, wife of a well known and respected citizen, living a mile and a quarter south of this place.

A Little three-year old stood by his mother's knee, looking his baby brother, a few months old, in the face. At length he inquired: "Mamma, did God make the baby?" "Yes, dear!" was the reply.

Touching one of the organs to which he referred with his finger, he inquired: "Did God put on his little ears?" "Certainly, my child," said the mother, waiting a minute, as though in a brown study, or pondering some weighty problem, he again broke out: "Well, I don't see who God couldn't put some more hair on his head as well as put on his ears."

MacShane on his Travels.

But if you want, dear Freeman, to see the people of New York and do not wish to go anywhere, take a West street passenger car. I took one of these vehicles and got half a mile ahead in two hours. The street was all the time literally paved with carriages, cars, drays, wagons, men, women and donkeys. As far as the eye could reach, up and down, a drop of rain would not have reached the earth without first coming in contact with some human being, or beast, or vehicle.

What commanded my admiration was the perfect good humor which prevailed. Not a fight, not an oath, not even an angry word, was heard, while the whole conglomeration appeared to be inextricably mixed up in a common maze. There the motly assemblage patiently plodded, or attempted to plod, along; and when any movement gave a few inches of room it was immediately occupied, and then a wait ensued for another chance to move.

I amused myself by scanning the immense crowd. Every nationality--every section--every age, sex, rank, color and condition--was represented in the multitude.

With my baggage in one hand and a lady on the other arm, I just along towards my destination. Our route lay through that delectable portion of the metropolis known as the Washington market, and the pavement being utterly impassable here, we were compelled to pass through the stalls.

So far as the patriot's boast, where'er he roam, his first, best country ever is at home.

DAN RICE.

Quite a number of papers have noticed approvingly the movement made by the friends of Dan Rice to bring him forward as a Presidential candidate. It would be premature, at this early day, to hazard a conjecture as to the result of this movement, but shall watch the indications of the popular mind.

DEATH OF HALLECK, THE POET.

A letter from Guilford, Conn., the home of the late Fitz Greene Halleck, says:--"On Sunday morning Mr. Halleck walked out for the last time, his object being to consult his physician, Dr. Canfield. The medicine prescribed afforded him temporary relief, but on Monday and Tuesday he complained of feeling very unwell, and during that period he received several visits from his physician. He retired earlier than usual on Tuesday, saying to his sister, Miss Halleck, 'I am afraid I shall not live till morning.' A few minutes before 11 o'clock she went to his bedroom, and found him sitting up in his bed. He said, 'Marie, hand me my pantsaloos, if you please.' She turned to the other side of the room to get them, but before she reached her brother's bed-side, he had fallen back dead--expiring without a moan or a struggle. And so

A RAFFLE FOR A PETTICOAT.

The following circular is being forwarded to many of the admirers of the "Late Lamented," but for what reason we cannot say. Who can explain?

SIR:--You and your partner are earnestly invited to attend for a raffle a petticoat, to be held at the rooms of Dennis Brady, Broadway, for the benefit of a bereaved widow, who is compelled to sell her spare duds to enable her to withdraw from public life with decency.

ONE LIE SQUARED.

One horror is laid at rest by the impeachment reports. The shocking charge that President Johnson murdered his predecessor is supported by not a word of evidence, direct or indirect, and when Ashley was finally called before the committee on the subject, only a week ago, he was obliged to confess that he never had any authority for the accusation beyond the word of that universal liar and perjurer, Conover. Butler's assassination committee will never report, and Congressmen who shock the country with their monstrous accusations of the President, will be glad to have their offence forgotten as speedily as possible.--Springfield Republican.

A LITTLE THREE-YEAR OLD.

A Little three-year old stood by his mother's knee, looking his baby brother, a few months old, in the face. At length he inquired: "Mamma, did God make the baby?" "Yes, dear!" was the reply.

Touching one of the organs to which he referred with his finger, he inquired: "Did God put on his little ears?" Gen. Grant's Testimony.

The testimony given before the Impeachment Committee by Gen. Grant amounts to only about this: He contended that the parole given to him at Lee's surrender by the Confederate soldiers gave them immunity from punishment, so long as they observed it, whilst the President contended that the officers ought to be punished. He was not in favor of the $20,000 clause, believing that men should not be excluded from pardon merely because they were wealthy. He also disagreed to the exclusion of volunteer generals from amnesty. He recommended a number of "rebel" officers for pardon.

He thought Gen. Johnson deserved pardon for his many addresses to his men at the surrender. He pronounced President Johnson's North Carolina proclamation and plan of civil governments for the Southern States, identical with that of Abraham Lincoln. He declared that he did not dissent from the plan, but was in favor of that or any other plan that would restore order and government in those States, but he considered the arrangement as only temporary or provisional.

On Saturday, at the close of the regular business in the District Court of Philadelphia, David Paul Brown, Esq., delivered a farewell address on behalf of the bar, it being the last day that Hon. Geo. Sharswood would preside as President Judge. Judge Sharswood made an appropriate response.

Owen McGovern was stabbed and killed by James Monteith, in Pittsburgh, on Thursday night last. McGovern had been drinking hard during the day, and struck Monteith several times. The latter then stabbed McGovern in the neck, killing him instantly. The assassin did not attempt to escape.

The telegraph announces the death on Friday, at Saratoga, New York, of the venerable R. H. Walworth, ex-Chancellor of New York. He had been an eminent and distinguished jurist--in his latter years he compiled and published a list of descendants of one of the noble families of Great Britain, who are settled in this country, and with which he was also connected.

The distance traveled by Weston the pedestrian, from Portland to Chicago, was 1,237 miles. He undertook to perform the task in 26 days, exclusive of Sundays, and accomplished it with two hours to spare. The average per day was a little more than 47 1/2 miles. He made four attempts to go one hundred miles in twenty-four hours, but failed each time.

The estimates for War Department expenses for the coming year are thirty million dollars in excess of last year. This is the result of keeping up a standing army to establish and maintain negro governments in the South. All this money will be demanded from the Northern people in the form of heavier taxes for the ensuing year. "Reconstruction" means higher taxes as well as negro domination.

One Wiggins was recently hung in London for murdering a woman, he all the while protesting his innocence and insisting that the woman committed suicide. New facts make it probable that poor Wiggins was judicially murdered, simply because he had not enough money to pay counsel and hunt up witnesses. The unfortunate man fought his executioners upon the scaffold and died struggling and shrieking.

Max Krugler, the German boy, who recently murdered his uncle in St. Louis, made a confession of the deed on Thursday. According to his statement, the murder was premeditated, and resulted from a desire to be revenged on his uncle, who had quarrelled with him. After the confession had been made the Germans present were so indignant that the police had some difficulty in restraining them from lynching the murderer.

The four sisters who met such a horrible death in the railroad accident near Cincinnati, last week, are daughters of the late Benjamin Morgan, of Philadelphia, and lately of New Orleans. They were on their way from St. Catharine, Canada, whither two of them--Rachel and Catherine--had been banished by Gen. Banks, during the war, for neglecting to salute Admiral Porter and a lady he was walking with, whom they met on the streets of New Orleans.

The Cleveland Leader says: "Weston is throughout a marvel, a mystery. The ordinary physical laws which govern him are at a loss when applied to him. He eats daily enough food to sustain three ordinary men. He rarely, in the warmest weather, or when walking fastest, perspires a drop. If he grows nervous and excited, he must either shed tears or bleed at the nose. After the most severe exertion he is never out of breath. Pedestrians usually lag toward the end of a day's walk. Weston is capable of six miles per hour till he drops--if, indeed, that should ever happen."

Weston, the pedestrian, had at last accounts, arrived at the termination of his great exploit on time--he failed to accomplish the task of walking a hundred miles in twenty-four hours, apparently from accidental circumstances, but he fully demonstrated that it was not from any want of the requisite speed in his pace or lack of physical endurance. One of the most remarkable features of this exploit is the reported sensitiveness or nervousness of the subject, who sheds tears, or bleeds at the nose, but does not perspire. It is said that he pockets four thousand dollars by accomplishing the feat. This we should call not only good walking, but good pay.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

A Yankee has purchased an island in the Ohio river, and stocked it with black cats, to raise the animals for the sake of the fur.

It is said that the Impachers will not be able to secure more than thirty votes in the Rump House, so that matter is effectually killed.

It is reported that the widow of the late General Thomas Francis Meagher is worth $400,000, the value of his mining interests in Montana.

In Portsmouth, New Hampshire, last week, the Democrats elected their municipal ticket for the first time, by 300 majority, a gain of 470 on last year.

Rev. Wm. H. Green, the Litchfield, Conn., wife poisoner, has been sentenced to be hung at Litchfield, Conn., on the 4th day of December, 1868, one year hence.

Mrs. Lucy Cobb has prosecuted Detective Baker for perjury, based upon his testimony before the Impeachment Committee. Baker evaded the service of the warrant, however, and cannot be found.

The negro who committed an outrage on Mrs. Baker at Pierceton, Indiana, was caught the same night. He made a full confession of the crime, and was then seized by a mob and stabbed, shot and beaten till he was dead. His body was then dragged through the streets.

Milton Mishler, of Lancaster, attempted to commit suicide on Saturday morning by shooting himself. The ball entered the lungs, and remains in the chest, the patient being too ill at present to have it removed, and refusing all stimulants to cause the necessary rest.

AMERICAN WALTHAM WATCHES.

The true value of Machinery applied to Watchmaking is not that by its use Watches are made rapidly, but that they are made correctly. Very few people know a Waltham Watch should be superior to any other. In the first place, at Waltham the Watches are regarded as only a machine, to be constructed like any other machine, on mechanical principles. If the watches are good it is because the machinery is good.

Of course there must be no defect in the principle or plan of movement--no mistake in the sizes or shapes of the pieces of which it is composed--nothing wanting in their properties, and no error in their positions. These points once thoroughly settled, it rests wholly with the machinery, constructed with infinite diversity of form and function expressly for the purpose, to produce the finished piece. By means of multiplying gauges and microscopes, tests and inspection for the detection of wear in the cutting tools, and for faults and flaws in steel and stone are made to accompany the work in every stage from beginning to end.

As a necessary result, the watch goes together a perfect machine. Every part is found to fit properly in its place. Every pin may be pushed till it pinches, and every screw turned home. Instead of sluggish and feeble action, the balance, even under the pressure of the lightest mainspring, vibrates with a wide and free motion, and the beat has the clear ringing sound always characteristic of the Waltham Watch. The machine is a timekeeper from the start.

This system of watchmaking is unknown in foreign countries, and is entirely original with the Waltham Company. The Company claim that by its process watches that cannot be equalled for every quality which makes a watch valuable. Simple in plan and correct in principle, the movement is not only beautifully finished, substantial, accurate and cheap, but is uniform in the minutest details, not easily damaged, and when repaired always as good as new.

There are different grades of finish in the different varieties of watches made by the Waltham Company, as there are different sizes and shapes to suit all tastes and means; but every Watch that bears the genuine trade-mark of "WALTHAM" is guaranteed to be a good one, and nobody need be afraid to buy it. Every Watch fully warranted. For sale by all first-class dealers in the United States and British Provinces. For further information address the Agents, ROBBINS & APPLETON, 182 Broadway, N. Y.
