

BY REQUEST. TRIAL BY JUDGES.

Every member of the bar, says the N. Y. Transcript, will recognize, on reading the admirable article which we reproduce from the Solicitor's Journal this morning, that we are suffering from the same haste in our trials which is changing the Nisi Prius in England. The trial of a cause in many cases now-a-days is conducted not by the counsel on either side, but by the court, and although the result is to materially shorten the proceedings, yet neither party has been able to set it before the jury according to his own theory and as it is his right to do. We have often seen a cross-examination, just as it is promised important results, ruined by the interposition of a Judge, to whom the unfortunate questioner was obliged to explain the materiality of his questions.

True, it is a sore trial to patience to be obliged to listen to immaterial questions repeated with abundant poverty of variation, but the same practice which relieves Courts and Judges from the infliction of destroying the great art of cross-examination, an art which has done perhaps more than any other towards the reign of Justice by the elucidation of truth.

With twenty Judges in our Superior Courts, as the makers of our new Constitution propose to constitute them, we shall have no excuse for this sort of interference in the conduct of trials, and we may expect a return to the good old custom of allowing a client, through his counsel to make or mar his case in his own way.

The following is the article alluded to: Much has been written lately about the function of the Judge in the trial of cases at Nisi Prius, and the extent to which he ought to interfere in the examination of witnesses, and other details of the trial. There discussions have been suggested by one or two recent "scandals," as they are commonly called, which have been tentatively treated as if they concerned only the idiosyncrasies of particular Judges or advocates, and as if those idiosyncrasies were the sole cause of certain modern practices which most of the writers have united in condemning. If we thought the subject had no other interest than this we should not meddle with it. But in our judgment the matter is one of far wider importance, and deserves to be treated far more comprehensively. The details which have been so much discussed are in fact only symptoms of a revolution which has long been in progress in the whole system of conducting trials at Nisi Prius.

The normal system of trying causes at Nisi Prius, as it is described in all the books, and recognized in countless acts of Parliament, and elsewhere, is a complete system, founded on a different theory, and perfectly harmonious in all its parts. Cases are tried before a double tribunal, a Judge and a jury, the one to decide issues of law, the other to decide issues of fact. In questions of law the Judge has no right to interfere; with questions of fact the Judge has nothing to do except to keep order in Court while the jury are trying them. In determining what issues of fact shall be brought before the jury, the Judge has no voice; the parties may, by their pleadings raise what question they please, and in what form, they please; what they choose to raise the Judge cannot keep from the jury, what they have raised the Judge cannot originate. And when the case comes for trial it is for the parties, represented by their counsel, to decide how they shall present their case to the jury who are to try it, what facts shall be told, what witnesses shall be called and what kept back, what points insisted on and what abandoned. The Judge sits in the ring as a mere referee to see that both parties fight fair. It is true that he may have incidentally to decide questions of law as they arise from time to time, and to exercise the power of the court in granting or refusing applications to his discretion applications to amend the pleadings, to adjourn the trial, to recall witnesses, and the like. It is true, too, that when the case is closed he will have to recapitulate the evidence to the jury, and in order that he do so correctly, he is at liberty to put such questions to the witnesses as seem necessary to him. But otherwise he is as much a stranger to the trial as any spectator in the court. In harmony with this are two characteristic features of our system of procedure—the cross-examination of witnesses, and our strict rules of evidence. Witnesses are cross-examined, not by the Judge, or to satisfy the mind of the Judge, but by the hostile counsel from instructions of which the Judge knows nothing, and for the purpose which the Judge may never understand—the object of the whole being to produce an impression on the minds of the jury. So as to our peculiar and strict rules of evidence; their necessity, as every authority states it, arises from this very method. The issues having to be decided by an unskilled tribunal, and the control of the cause being in the hands not of an impartial Judge, but the parties themselves, it is absolutely necessary to define, with minute accuracy, what they may bring before the jury, and what they may not. The Judge enforces these rules, but he has no discretion whatever as to what shall be admitted and what shall not.

There can be no question that such is in theory the mode of trying issues of fact according to the law of England. It is plain that owing to the constant appeals to him in his judicial capacity to decide points incidentally arising, the Judge could never be anything like a spectator in court. And apart from his strictly official authority the influence of a wise and able man in such a position, both with counsel and jury, must of course be immense. But we believe that until lately the two fundamental principles that the jury alone has the control and conduct of the cause, were very generally observed. Judges and counsel alike were scrupulous in sitting law from fact, and assigning each to the proper jurisdiction. The Judge habitually abstained from taking any part in the case except such as belong to him as Judge of the law and referee in the contest. And causes were ordinarily tried out in due, addresses to the jury, examination, cross-examination, summing up and verdict following one after another in the regular and unbroken sequence contemplated by law. And this is an admirable mode of trial. Indeed, we believe that in the long run it is the only system by which justice can be done before such a tribunal. The tribunal being one wholly untrained in judicial inquiry, this system provides that the case in court shall be conducted by men who thoroughly know the case beforehand, and know what it is desirable to bring forward, and what it is not, and who are chosen for their special skill in presenting facts to the minds of a jury,—and thus it secures a thorough investigation of the case. Moreover, it peculiarly guards the dignity of the Judge. The Judge reigns but does not rule; he is first in dignity, but not in power; he presides over the inquiry, but has no voice in its result. This is a somewhat delicate position when filled by a man of energy, and in the presence of zealous counsel, who have nothing but the verdict of the jury in view; and it is obvious that a strict adherence to the order of proceedings, and a strict observance by each party—Judge, jury and counsel—of the province which theoretically belongs to each, is the surest way to avoid any collision or misunderstanding between them.

But this regular and formal mode of trying out cases has one drawback—it is not always the quickest mode. Counsel may waste time by tedious speeches, or needless elaboration of evidence, or vague, fishing cross-examination; the Judge may often see a short cut over a still more shorter than the high road; some mode of getting at the facts quicker than the regular one; some way of disposing of the case without trying it out; and the one object in all our courts now is to save time. They are burdened with arrears; the Judges are pushing a Sisyphean load uphill. There are of course differences between Judges. They like other men are not all equal in self-control, in patience, in temper, in discretion, and some have shown themselves gravely deficient in these qualities. But the main cause of the great change which has taken place is the desire to get through the work as quickly as possible. The result is that instead of cases being for the most part tried out in all form, like a game of chess, as they were once in England, and as they still generally are in Ireland, it is not one case in ten that is tried at all; they are forced to compromise, or a reference, or something, to drive them out of court. If a case is tried it is commonly tried in a rough and ready fashion; the one object is to get the two stories known, and the facts on the Judge's notes, as fast as possible, regularly—irregularly—anyhow. As for the solemn order of procedure, the sifting of law from fact, and distinguishing the functions of the Judge, jury and counsel in the old-fashioned way, there is no time for that. Cross-examination, which to be of any real use must be slow, cautious, tentative; must win, if at all, not by assault, but by the patient and covert labor of the engineer, and must therefore occupy time, is being practically abandoned.

No one familiar with Nisi Prius trials will think that we have exaggerated the change which has taken place and is still going on in the conduct of business. We believe this to be a most serious evil; for we hold that cases before a Judge and jury can only be fairly tried in the old strict fashion, all parties adhering to their several functions. But we are not much inclined to blame Judges or counsel for the past that things have come to this; they have only acted on the belief that it is better to settle many cases somehow than a few cases well. The remedy must come from the Legislature. In the first place, whether by adding to the number of Judges, or by redistributing their work, or both, more Judges for Nisi Prius trials before a jury, is by far the slowest of all possible modes of trial, and is by no means in all cases the most suitable. It would be an enormous saving of time, and in the opinion of many a great improvement also in the administration of justice if many cases now tried before a Judge and jury were tried before a Judge alone. Instead of as now, trial by jury being in all cases the rule, with only a power to try before a Judge by consent, it may well be questioned whether in many large classes of cases the trial should not be before a Judge, unless either party specially applied for a jury. This system works admirably in the Divorce Court, and in the country courts. At any rate it would be a less evil to change the tribunal at once than, as at present, to retain the tribunal and abandon the procedure which can alone make that tribunal a safe one.

TO OWNERS OF HORSES.—Thousands of horses die yearly from Glanders. This is not a new disease, but one which has been known for centuries. It is a contagious disease, and is caused by a virus which is found in the mucus of the nose and throat of infected horses. It is a very dangerous disease, and is often fatal. The only way to prevent it is by vaccination. Dr. Tobias' Venetian Horse Linctus will positively cure every case, if given when first taken. The cost is only one dollar. Every owner of a horse should have a bottle in his stable, ready for use. It is a warranted specific to any kind of Glanders, whether it be in the nose, throat, or lungs. It is a very valuable medicine, and is sold by all Druggists. Price, one dollar per bottle. Sent by mail, one dollar and postage. Dr. Tobias' Venetian Horse Linctus is put up in pint bottles. Take no other. Sold by the Druggists and Dealers. Depot, 55 Cortlandt Street, New York.

STROKES OF YOUTH.—A gentleman who suffered for years from Nervous Debility, Premature Decay, and all the effects of youthful indiscretion, will, for the sake of suffering humanity, send free to all who need it, the recipe and directions for making the simple remedy by which he was cured. Sufferers wishing to profit by the advertiser's experience, can do so by addressing, in perfect confidence, JOHN B. OGDEN, 42 Cedar Street, N. Y.
