Нвмі.оск, Feb. 24, 1868. Dear Freeman :- Knowing no good reas son why the readers of the Freeman should not occasionally have the news from Old Washington, particularly about election times, I am induced to give them the returns of the election on Friday last. The Mongrelites had everything cut and dry for a grand campaign, and to their great astonishment succeeded in being gloriously defeated. It was the most amusing election that Washington has had for some time. In order to make a show at all the opposition formed a ticket of Democrats and Republicans. It is but justice to the Democrats, or your last paper, I thought I should solve it, most of them at least, to say that they knew and having got an answer, I send it to you | nothing of the arrangement, and that their names were used without their consent. At the end of the sixty-eighth day B. had They went on the method that desperate cases require desperate remedies, and their the "oldest inhabitants," but was of no avail.
