Jones, a farmer residing Cambria township, a short distance from this place, recently lost no less than eight valuable cows by death within a period of two weeks. We learned nothing as to the probable cause of the mortality, but it is said that the animals first became blind, and then frothed at the mouth and manifested other symptoms of a hydrophobial character. Some impious wretch sawed the large and elegant cross recently erected on the new Catholic convent at Altoona, not many nights since, and left it in a condition, as he thought, to be toppled over by the first high wind. Its condition was fortunately discovered in time to prevent the consummation of the dastardly purpose. We trest the scoundrel will be ferreted out and severely punished.

A COURT INCIDENT .- A rather ludicrous affair occurred during the late session of the a young German, on his way to the West Cambria County Court. A witness residing in an adjoining county was subpensed to attend the Court, without obeying, and an attachment was awarded to bring his body, "nolus bolus," as Gen. Taylor once said .-The deputy, in whose hands the process of Gott! mein gelt is folora; was will I do?" the Court had been placed, ignorant of his powers in the premises, sought the recusant witness, and in vain endeavored to inveigle him to accompany him. The witness demanded the "days of grace," and protested against coming.

The Teutonic deputy returned and reported to his Henor that he had found the witness, but that he was unwilling to come .-The Judge rebuked him and told him his duty was to bring, "peaceably if he could, forcibly if he must." the defaulting witness.

Armed with his new instructions, the offiver again sought the witness, and this time threatened him with his power. The witness, without getting into a huff, coolly bided his time, and taking the hapless Teaton at an advantage, bound him hand and foot, as did the Philistines with Sampson of old, and laid him on the floor. The amazed deputy loudly remonstrated against this new method of "laying down the law," and made sundry

DEATH OF JOHN C. O'NEILL. - By a telegram from New Orleans, directed to Judge Shannon of Pittsburgh, we are informed of the death, in the former city, of John C. O'Neill, Esq., on Wednesday, the 11th of March, ultimo.

Mr. O'Neill was born in Ireland, and emigrated to this country with his parents when but a child. He attained his majority in Cambria county, and afterwards figured somewhat extensively in the politics of the county and State. In 1851 he was appointed Superintendent of the Alleghany Portage Rail Road, but a change in the Canal Board rendered his official career brief. On the accession of General Pierce to the Presidency he received the appointment of Consul to Belfast, and during his absence visited the continent of Europe. He served the government in various capacities during the rebelhis residence in New Orleans, where he continued to reside until his death.

He was distinguished mainly by a force of character that disregarded all obstacles to the fulfilment of his wishes, while his pertally shot and killed himself, a couple of sonal appearance and address rarely failed to

Melancholy Death by Suicide .- An inquest was held by Coroner Bradford, on Wednesday, upon the body of Judge Jno. C. O'Neil, who was carried to the Charity Hospital a few hours previous, and who shortly after

The inquest showed that the deceased had come to his death from morphine, which he had voluntarily taken. He had committed suicide by poison, and the act had evidently been a deliberate one. A letter written to an old friend will show better than any comment with what terrible tranquility the deed was contemplated, and is suggestive rather of the fatalism of the East or the philosophy of the stoic, than of any similar death that we can now remember to have when it fell. The bridge will be rebuilt impreviously recorded:

"When this reaches you I will have ceased to exist. . . I have nothing to live for. I care nothing about life. I am curious to know what comes next. I am perfectly Dr. Brallier, with the first-class wholesale culm and collected-never more so. You are a full beliver in spiritualism, I a partial believer. "Bury me how you please. I have no more to say. Give as little notoriety to my death as possible. And good bye. I carry out of the world no bitterness to any one. Again J. C. O'N. 32

The deceased had occupied many positions also the names of those who have paid our of honor and trust during his life—having, agents for the old year. This will be the for instance, been at one time Judge of a Supreme Court in Pennsylvania, and subsequently United States Consul at Dublin. He had been residing in this city for about eighteen months.

He leaves behind him a large circle of friends, whom he attached to himself by his talents and many generous qualities, and who will learn with regret the sad termination of his earthly career.

In the trunk of the deceased was found a claim against the United States Government for something like $19,000. His circum stances were embarrassed at the time of his death, but not, perhaps, permanently so, oenough in ordinary cases to have awakened thoughts of death.

for Sale, &c., &c. JOHNSTOWN, March 30, 1368. Dear Freeman - The feast day of the apostle and patron of the Irish race was duly honored in this town by our Celtic fellowcitizens, and in the evening Bishop Dominec delivered an elequent panegyric on the Patriarch and Saint, to a large and attentive audience, in St. John's Church. The records of down-trodden and oppressed Ireland are stained with the blood of the bravest and best, and the only gleam of sunshine amid her sad and bitter memories is the history and traditions of the great St. lion, and about the close of the war made | Patrick. The relentless persecution of centuries has had no more effect against the seed sown by the humble missionary than have the angry waves against the rock-bound coast where they dash and break, and well may the exiled children of Erin, in every city, village and hamlet, honor the day and pay respect to the memory of their noble and saintly patron.

The Mechanical Works commenced building a temporary bridge over the Stony Creek on Monday last, and had almost completed it by Friday afternoon, when, owing to the temporary removal of several of the stays, which were in the road of adjusting some of the string timbers, the entire structure gave way, precipitating two ladies, two little girls, a boy, and three of the carpenters into the river. Mrs. Bowen, one of the ladies, became entangled in the floating debris, and was with great difficulty rescued. The boy, a young lad named B:inker, had his ancle broken, and W. J. Rose sustained severe injuries of the side and back. The others were all drawn out unburt. Your correspondent was working on the bridge at the time it commenced falling, and barely made his escape by running to shere. About a dozen persons were employed at the work, but tuckily the most of them were at either end mediately.

The corner stone of the new U. B. Church was laid yesterday, and an immense throng was in attendance to witness the imposing ceremonies. Bishop Glossbrenner, of Baltimore, assisted by a number of other ministers, officiated. It is designed to push the building to an early completion.

The announcement had been previously made that a lecture would be delivered in our new Hail, on the 17th, by Rev. F. P. O'Shea, of St. Francis' College, Loretto .-At seven o'clock in the evening Father O'-Shea and our own devoted Pastor, Rev. J. Walsh, entered the Hall. St. Mary's Brass Band favored the audience with a few pieces, rendered in a most efficient manner. This Band has been but recently formed by members of the congregation, who have spared neither labor nor expense in their efforts to acquire proficiency in the delightful art of the Venetian Liniment. Remember, if you music, and it is generally admitted that they have so far been highly successful. The Junior String Band next performed two pieces with considerable taste and correctness. This little Band is composed of some twenty pupils of St. Mary's Academy for Boys. They have been practising only a few as is the case after using the many Liniments, weeks, and this was their first appearance in public. The audience manifested their appreciation of the unexpected musical treat

by the most hearty applause. This was fol-came the much wished for intellectual treat of the evening. Father O'Shea took the stand, and during the continuance of his deeply learned and historical discourse held the large assembly spell-bound. His subject was "Ireland"a faint outline of the Rev. orator's remarks.
