SPIRITED CASE OF LARGENY .- Davy Powell is a well-to-do Welsh farmer restding a few miles from our town. Like the rest of humanity, Davy has his weaknesses. prominent among which is a fondness for what is technically known as "tanglefoot." We do not know that Davy is an immoderate drinker, or that he "indulges" any more freely than thousands of others who would scorn the idea of being considered habitual drankards, but certain it is that he goes on the principle that a barrel of whisky is a good thing to have in the house, cow or no cow, and hence he supplies his spiritual wants by the wholesale when necessity demands or appetite craves the replenishing of his stock of "fire-water." In accordance with this custom, he received a barrel of whisky on Saturday last, and contracted with Tommy Thomas to transport it to its destination. Reaching the farm of Mr. John Hughes, a short distance from town, Davy Sylvauus Cobb, jr. Powell, jr., met the party, and prevailed on them to unload the "benzine" and leave it II Zaza at Mr. Hughes' barn until Monday morning, assigning as a reason that Mr. Powell's residence was too far distant for Mr. Thomas to wond his weary way thither and return to his own home that evening. The whisky was accordingly unloaded, and as it was thought, safely stowed away; when the Restored to its original Youthful Color by several parties wended their ways to their respective homes.
