deelared itself the "government," and has treated the executive head of the nation as a mere supernumerary and an incumbrance. It makes all the difference in the world with these loyal gentlemen whether the Chief Executive is in the interests of Radicalism, or whether he considers the validity of an oath, and is only willing to administer the government according to the terms of the Coustitution. It was in the latter character that Andrew Johnson chose to act, and for that reason he has been vilified, denounced and thwarted at every turn. Congress has arrogated to itself all the powers and prerogatives of the government ; has been at once the Legislative, Judicial and the Executive | tains. branches; has made the law, expounded the law, executed the law; has, in a word, been law maker, judge and sheriff-not to say a very great criminal besides.

Their two thirds majority in Congress has allowed the Radicals to do these things. Andrew Johnson, however much he may this evening. have disappointed the real friends of the country in many particulars, has shown about the ability of Hiram Simpson, alias himself in his contest with Congress to be Ulysses Samnel, as a speaker. as true a man as ever filled the Presidential chair. But he has been President under very peculiar circumstances. No other President labored under the disadvantage of being confronted by a two-thirds majority. Andrew Jackson himself could have done nothing more than Andrew Johnson has done-he could only have interposed his vetoes between the mad violence of Congress and a suffering people, and his vetces, like Andrew Johnsen's, would only have been overridden, and himself put to scorn. And so it can only be in the future, unless the complexion of Congress is changed at the same time that a Democratic President takes hold of the reins of government. Horatio Seymour is a good man-as a statesman immeasurably the superior of General Grant-but to be President with Congress as it is now composed can be productive of but little good to the country.

It is our duty, as American citizens, to remove this Congress-this clog to the peace, prosperity and happiness of our country; to choke off the leeches and vampires that are exhausting the life-blood of the nation; to not only elect a man to the Presidency who is fit to fill the chair that has been occupied by Washington, Madison, Jackson and Buchanan, but at the same time to remove every obstacle to the clear and full discharge of the duties of his office. We do not ask for a Cromwell to clear eur halls of Congress at the point of the sword, to plunge the country anew into the horrors of a civil war, "And shut the gates of mercy on mankind."

There is a more peaceable way out of the difficulty. It is in the hands of every American citizen. It is the ballot. Let us vote in the spirit of intelligence and patriotism, and the Radicals will be driven from Washington as the thieves and money-changers spoken of in the good book were driven from the temple.
