A GLANCE AT THE FIELD. - The Louisville Joarnal, after a careful survey of the field fought over on the 15th mst., concludes that in the Presidential contest we can, with proper exertion, carry every one of the States that went against us that day. "Let no conservative doubt this," says the Journal, "but dismissing doubt and casting off all inertness, give to the country his days and nights until the sun goes down on the final contest. If we put our shoulders to the wheel and give a long push, a strong push, and a push all together, we cannot fail to lift from the mire of revolution the stately vehicle of the government, and set it once more, in its original strength and beauty, on the broad highway of the constitution. The simple possibility of doing this would justify a greater effort than is required actually to do it. And shall this effort not be made? Shall we fold our arms in supineness or turn away in despair? No : the memorles of the past, the interests of the present. and the hopes of the future, unite to forbid it.
