TWO GHOST STORIES.

The world still contains a large number of people who believe in ghosts as West Point on the very day the plot was firmly as in their own existence. If any of these happen to be among the readers of the Portfolio, they will see by the following instances of supposed ghostly visite passed, to spend the night there and inations, which are chipped from a ghost spect some works in the neighborhood chapter in an English paper, that people can be mistaken even about things supernatural : - Metropolitan Record.

THE WOODSTOCK GROST. The most celebrated instance in which human agency was made to arouse the fears of the timid by a pretence of supernatural disturbance refers to the ancient palace of Woodstock, when the Commissioners appointed by Parliament went down to destroy the residence of the king :

They arrived at Woodstock on the 13th of October, 1649, determined to wipe away friend without outering a syllable, placed the memory of all that connected itself with the fatal despatch in his hands, and then, the recollection of monarchy in England; but in the course of their progress they were encountered by obstacles which apparently came from the next world. Their bedchambers were infested with visits of a thing recembling a dog, but which came and pass d as mere earthly dogs cannot do. Logs of devoid of the usual weakness of humanity, wood, the remains of a very large tree called may be imagined. "I believe," said La the King's Oak, which they had splintered | Fayette in relating this anecdote, "that into billets for burning, were tossed through the house, and the chairs displaced and shuffled about. White they were in bed the feet of their couches were lifted higher than their heads, and then dropped with violence. Trenchers "without a wish" flew at the'r heads of free-will. Thunder and lightning came next, which were set down to the same of feeling so foreign to his temperament. cause. Spectres made their appearance, as they thought, in different shapes, and one of the party saw the apparition of a hoof, which kicked a candlestick and lighted candle into the middle of the room, and then politely scratched on the red souff to extinguish it. Other and worse tricks were practised on the | pendency."-"Boyond the Breakers," in astonished Commissioners, who, considering Feb. No. of Lippincott's Magazine. that all the fiends of hell were let loose upon them, retreated from Woodstock without completing an errand which was in their opinion impeded by infernal powers, though the opposition offered was rather of a playful and malicious turn than of a dangerous cast. definitely settled, it was the custom of the The whole matter was after the Re t ration discovered to be a trick of one of their own party, who had attended the Commissioners as a clerk under the name of Giles Sharp. This man, whose real name was Joseph Collins, of Oxford, callet "Fanny making such offences punishable by fine, Joe," was a concealed Royalist, and well acquainted with the old mansion of Woodstock, where he had been brought up before the Civil War. Being a bold, active, spirited man, Joe availed himself of his local knowledge of trap doors and private passages, so as to favor the tricks which he played off upon his masters by aid of his fellow domestics. THE SINGING CHOSTS.

Sometimes the secrets of science are made out a write of habeas corpus, and by and his guest. As a certain old castle on the justice obtained a reversal of his sens the borders of Hungary the owner had resolved to celebrate an entertainment worthy of his wealth and of the magnificence of the ancient structure in which it was to be held. A numerous company was invited, among whom an officer of Hussars of great personal bravery, and who had distinguished himself in the wars, was prominent.

Shortly after the arrival of the party the host intimated to his guests that, spacious as the castle was, it would be found insuffi cient to accommodate so large a number of guests, unless one of the party consented to out difficulty proven against the culprit, sleep in the chamber which was haunted, he turned to the constable and said : and as the martial Hussar was known to be above such prejudices, the preference was assigned to him. The officer signified his acquiescence, and after sharing the festivities of the evening retired to his chamber shortly after midnight, vowing vengeance against any one who should disterb his rest. in New-Jersey needed codifying. He was careful, however, in getting into bed, not to extinguish the light, and to leave his leaded pistois beside him.

After sleeping for about an hour he was awakened by the strains of music at the farther end of the apartment, and looking out, he distinctly observed three ladies of fantastic appearance, and dressed in green, who saug a solemn requiem. Charmed at first with their visit, the officer sat up and listened to the chant, but at longth, no alteration being made in the air, he became weary, and requested them at least to alter the melody? The ladies sang on regardless of their host's demands, when the Major lost

"Maidens," he cried, "this is but a trick to annoy me; disappear, or reap the consequences."

The figures were motionless, but sang on. when the officer, fairly excited, seized his pistols, and called out that he would fire in five minutes if the chant were not discontinued. The song was uninterrupted-the time expired.

"Ladies," said he now thoroughly exasperated. "I will count twenty, and thus yet give you law," He commenced counting accordingly, and as he pronounced the word "twen'y," he fired both pistols at the musical damsels, who to his utter confusion and astenishment sang on as before!

The total discomfiture of the gallant officer, and the futility of his violence, brought upon him a serious illness, and he was confined to his bed for several weeks. The explanation of the phenomenon is easy. The female choristers were placed and sang in an adjoining room, and our hero fired at their reflection, which had been thrown into the room by a concave mirror.

A HARD Pesition .- Zion's Herald publishes a story about one of those "good little boy? who unfortunately almost always die young. In the course of the story the little hero is placed in the following trying position. He certainly needed sympathy :

Oh, how pleasant would be the company of lit le cuildren were they only such as Burtie. He minded what was said to him, and was never saucy. The poor little fellow, when about six years of age, fell on a red bot stove and burnt both his bands to a blister. In his agony he sprang and leaped about at such a frantic rate that no one could catch him. His cries brought all the passers to the deers and windows of the house. "Oh dear! oh dear!" he screamed, "I want to swear; and if I swear I shall go to hell, and what shall I do?"

There was a laugh without, and one man said, "A child that will resist temptation under such circumstances will make a man AILEY, FARRELL & CO. that will stand by his principles."
"My dear son," said Bertie's father, "try and not make such a terrible noise. Is does you no good."

"On, papa, I am trying; but if you felt as I do. you'd halloo, too. You are doing the best you can, and I am doing the best I can, and what more can we do?"

Plumbers', Gas and Steam Fitters' Materials, This raised another laugh; but every body seemed to feel great sympathy with the your little sufferer.

THE UNIVERSAL CLOTHES WRINGER.

Cannot be surpassed or equaled by any other Wringer for durability. J. LLOYD, successor to R. S. of the patent for the "COG WHEEL REGbeing universally conceded that Cogs are necessary to prevent the holls from being broken or torn loose, many attempts have been made to get a Cog-Wheel arrangement which shall equal the UNIVERSAL, and yet avoid the "Stop-Gear." but without success.
