[From the New Orleans Morning Star ] THE SISTER OF CHARITY.

BY RICHARD DALTON WILLIAMS.

The poem of Gerald Griffin, on the same subject, is familiar to our readers. The following, by Dr. Williams, -not unlike it-is a model of purity, breathing, as it does, accents of love and holiness. The author lived for some time in this city, and endeared himself to all who had the happiness of ferming very dept hs—an inward serenity, which bore her away. But I knew it had gone year, to take up the transcript he has receivin 1862:
