Johnstown, Nov. 8, 1869. Dear Freeman-A dispute has arisen beween the Borough authorities of Johnstown and Conemaugh, which promises to be prolific of litigation and may yet be the means of feathering some lawyers' nests. An attempt was made lately to pave Railroad street, in Conemaugh borough, and as that street is higher than Johnstown, the water tables will carry the water out of the former into the latter borough. The same difficulty occurs on Locust street. Like the farmer that watched the two spotted pigs fighting, we don't care which licks; nevertheless, as a local journalist, we might suggest a few CARROLLTOWN, Nov. 8, 1868. Dear Freeman-Two days of " Indian Summer " were vouchsafed us last week, but since then we have been luxuriating in extreme cold weather that would be no disgrace to mid-winter. Yesterday was the stormiest of the season, and the small amount of snow which fell the day previous has drifted in some places to the depth of two feet.

I have at various times noted the improvements which have been made here during the spring and summer and will now re-capitulate. Imprimis, we have a large brick building erected adjacent to the Catholic church by the congregation here, and designed as a convent and school, to be under the charge of the Benedictine Sisters. Next, Mr. Fredmaugh township, two or three years ago, erick Snyder has crected a very commodious when the authorities paved Main street up dwelling house and store room combined, to the very line and connected the water upon which the plasterers are now at work and in the course of a couple months it will 2d. COLD AS FIRE .- A gentleman in the 5th ward, Johnstown, woke up one morning last week, and as he passed along Market he saw the iron bridge over Stony creek in one broad sheet of-not fire-but frost and ice. This reminded him that winter was coming on, and instead of going to market he went to L Cohen & Brother's New York Clothing Hall, No. 214 Main street, Opera House, and treated himself to $40 worth of fashionable clothing. That's so. Let one hundred others do likewise, and several hundred more follow their example.

Nor ANY .- "Say, Tom, is that your wife, piece of feminine humanity tripping along on the other side of the street ?" "Not any, Sammy, but that's my stove yonder, just being put on that wagon in front of Huntley's cheap house-furnishing emporium, and I wouldn't take for it double the money I paid were it not that Huntley has plenty more just as pretty and just as cheap, and is determined that no body shall freeze the coming winter for want of a good stove, if he can help it. Better bny one, Sam."

JAMES J. MURPHY .- What shall we say or him? What can we say? The English language is inadequate to express our delight at his success. His Star (*) Clothing Store, No. 109 Cl nton street, is a real antiprestidigatational and metaphorical anomally in the transmutation of goods to money. He has the most unparallelled concatination of success ever known, chiefly because he sells clothing cheap. He has but one price. he is always there, he is kind and obliging, and he doesn't go off at a tangent if a customer doesn't chance to buy everything.

Sunday night, with its boisterous winds and piercing cold, was an unpropitious one for sailing into the blissful haven of wedded life, but as our friend Gibbs and his amiable young bride succeeded in "making the riffle," despite the warring of the elements, we foully hope they will find calm and contentment, peace and happiness, prosperity, and all other earthly blessings, beyond its confines; and while they cannot hope to escape all the cares and trials of life, and would not wish to avoid its "little responsibilities," we trust they will find more of pleasure and less of pain in the realities of the future than even their brightest anticipations could picture or their most ardent aspirations could hope for. May they ever be happy in promoting the happiness of each other.

The deceased was one of those amiable and accomplished young ladies whose early demise that fair haired, dark eyed, graceful little always leaves a deep and poignant ting. Her illness, though long and painful, was borne. with Christian fortitude; and she closed an ex emplary life by a happy death. Saying to those around her, "I will now go to sleep!" she caunly resigned her soul into the hands of her crucified Redeemer. Her heart-stricken parents and deeply grieved relatives and friends can find consolation in the reflection that their loss is her eternal gain. May she rest in peace.
