A bant of brown, with muscles of steel, The threat of a fee to grasp; A hand that is loving, bold and leal, And free for friendly clasp t A fiand to give and a hand to gain, To steady the plow, to reap the grain, Or to guide the ship o'er the raging main.

An honest hand for a friend to hold With a grip both fond and true; A hand that is mightier far than gold. And ever ready to do; A hand for the weak to grasp at need, That often toils for a scanty meed, And manfully works for a noble deed.

A hand that is blackened with labor's stain, And bold in the cause of right; A tender hand by the couch of pain, Its touch of love made light; A hand for woman to lovingly cling. To make on the anvil the iron ring, To level a throne or crown a king.

A HARD WINTER IMPENDING .- Without claiming to be especially weather-wise ourselves, although we have some views of our own on the subject of the seasons, deduced from observation, experience and study, we cannot but attach sufficient credit to the signs and tokens which old bunters and woodmen on this continent, and scientific calculaters in Europe are adducing to sustain the prediction that we are to have an early and severe winter throughout the Northern Hemisphere.

The beavers and prairie dogs in the West and Northwest of America, along with many other animals that house themsolves away in the cold season, have greatly advanced their preparations for the frost this year, and on the Atlantic coast the Storm King sends us no equivocal or frequent warning.

In Europe, no less important an organ of learned opinion than the Bulletin of the Scientific Society announces that the wintor of 1868 and 1870 will be exceptionully severe on the Eastern Hemisphere. It reminds its readers of the fact that the winter of 1868 and 1869 was very remarkable for its mildness. The three most moderate preceding winters of the century had been those of 1822, 1828 and 1834.

M. Rebon, writing to the bulletin above mentioned, tells the world that since the atmospheric pertuberations of 1859 60, the years have been warmer, clearer and dryer, and the barometer pressure lighter Holland, than before. The anomalies, he thinks, cannot fail to find their compensation ere long, the winter before last closely corresponding with that of 1828, and everything betokening that about 1870 we shall have a great winter like that of 1829 30.

To those whose business consists in the already fill their homes-but to the poor it is alarming. Fuel, clothing, bread and all, they apprehend, will be dearer, and work harder to get.

The savouts are not invariably right, but there is accumulated evidence in their favor to show that on general indications, and careful comparisons kept up for years past, they can make some fair predictions concerning the year to come. At all events, thrift and wise precaution never do any harm, and should the phenominally severe seasons thus predicted ensue, our 1 ISSOLUTION. — The partnership acres, more or less, about 40 acres of which are friends may not blame us for having given them this bint in good time. - N.
