SHOOTING OF THE EVANS BOYS .- We are indebted to Mr. E. L. Edwards for a copy of the Atchison County (Mo.) last by the shooting and serious wounding of court in every state and every nation listens the Evans boys by Capt. Wm. M Blake, the particulars of which we have endeavored to ascertain as accurately as possible.

It seems that on Friday, the 21st instant, "Andy" and "Ed" Evans, brothers, residents of Lost Grove, some five or six miles east of Rock Port, were in town and had been drinking freely, and, as was their habit when under the influence of liquor, flourished their revolvers wildly, intimidating whomsoever "crossed their path." They threatened some of our citizes with divers persecutions -- in one or two of the Tribune due credit for his wise disinstances carrying their threats into execution -and others with the taking of their lives; and even went so far as to brandish their revolvers in a menacing manuer in the face of Captain Blake, compelling him to submit to much abuse and insult at their hands. They also resorted to the same "game" with others of our citizens, and it was with difficulty they could be persuaded to desist, in spite of repeated warnings, and leave town. They went, however, at last, but threatened to return on Monday, as we are informed, to "kill Captain Blake and clean out Rock Port "

Monday came, but if they had intended to return on their mission of death and "revenge" they did not do it. On Tuesday they came to town, and their purpose being strongly suspected, parties who had been promised their lives should be sacrificed were put on their guard. Shortly before 11 o'clock a collision occurred between the Evans's and Capt Blake, on Rock street, in the neighborhood of Traub's blacksmith shop, when a short conversation ensued in regard to the proceedings of Friday. The Captain asked a retraction, when Ed , who had mounted his horse, replied with a shot from Blake's neck. At the same time, almost, the standing a few paces off, holding his revolver in a threatening attitude, the ball taking effect in his side and producing a slight flesh wound. Blake then turned and fired at Ed., shooting him through the body about midway; turning around, he let the elder Evans have a shot in the head, the ball striking him almost squarely in the middle of the nose, penetrating to the rear of the right ear; turning again, the Capt. observed the younger Evans "fleeing from the wrath to come" in hot haste around the corner into Main street. Stepping quickly to the cor ner, he let him have one more shot, which the back of the saddle prevented from taking effect

By this time a large crowd of excited persons had gathered, and all seemed to comprehend the situation at once. They had anticipated it. They knew that the Evans boys had mistaken their man.

The wounded men ought refuge-the clder in Buckham, Shelters & Co.'s store and the other at Reiter's Saloon, where medical aid was furnished them. The wounds that each sustained were found to be very serious, and it was thought for a time they would prove fatal.
