Our correspondent is certainly drawing very largely on his imagination when he supposes that the present generation, to say the least, even if things remain as they are, or that the democrats of his own or any other Southern township, as a body, would be willing to hand themselves over to the political control of the radical party, which he admits would be the case if a division of the county should ever be effected. Moreover, when he acknowledges ple of Northern Cambria by removing the county seat to Johnstown he admits that a great wrong would be done-such a v. rong, inthat never will and in the nature of things never can be consummated.
