[The present hot weather, in itself quite debil-Itating and almost unendorable, says the Bedford Gazette, would be still more tolerable but for the swarm of pestiferous flies that abound on every hand, and that follow one into the most shady and secluded nook. In vain do we attempt to hide from these abominable intru-ders, for the wicked may flee whither they will. To THE SMALL FRY! yet the fly pursueth-and successful and annoving is the pursuit thereof. And the good housewife has her troubles, too, with the Musca domeetica, the aunoyance of the kitchen and the dining hall. Cruel and undeserved persecution everywhere by this insect nulsance and the thermometerso high that one is too much overcome to say "Shoo Fly!" But while this hot weather developes innumerable flies, the unsuccessful warfare to shoo these pests out of existence, has aroused the latent powers of our "pole," who, in a frantic but futile attempt to take an after dinner nap, got off the following. which is not according to Longfellow. Hear him:

THE HORRIBLE FLY. Oh, the fly ! the horrible fly ! Dabbling at nose, and mouth, and eye, Over the celling, ever the meat, Over all the people eat, Buzzing,

Crawling about,

Damnable insect, you git out! Wading in paint on a lady's cheek, Leaving behind a tortuous streak, Accursed fly! From the hell below, Never came pests that plague us so.

Dancing.

Fresh from the sty, The filthy sty, where the porkers lie. And even the dogs, with a snarl and a bound, Shap at the insects that swarm around.

The air is blue with oaths that try To drown the hum of the "ojue" fly. When the weary pllgrim seeks repose. There's a hornpipe danced on the top of his nose There's a vigorous d-n, and a slam and slap,

And that's the end of the pllgrim's nap.

Singing. Stinging, Why, oh, why, Did God create this pestilent fly?

Once I was pious, but fell from grace-Played the knave open, and coppered the ace-Made of myself a terrible guy. When the devil caught me out on the fly,

How strange it is that woman will try To kill with combat this villainous fly; How strange it seems, when a million are slain, To find the multitude doubled again. Whisking,

With clammy feet, Hunting us out in quiet retreat.

If, like Toby, at the fly we swear, And the angel recorder enters it there, Give us, then, the ever welcome doubt, That the tear of mercy will blot it out.

A Strange Being.

The Woman-Man of Washington County, Texas. A correspondent of the New Orleans Picayune says: During a recent sejourn in the Lone Star State, my attention was called to a curiosity, or a freak of nature, more won derful than the three-horned ox, and a harder dose for skeptics than the fact of a hog playing seven-up. About six miles from Chap-pell Hill, Washington County, Texas, there is a negro, about twenty five years of age, who can truly be called a woman-manbeing physically a man, with the nature, disposition and temperament of a woman, He was born in Washington county, is now in the employ of Judge Landes, and was formerly employed by Mr. M. Montgomery, of the same county. While a youth he als ways had a desire to wear girls' clothes, and did such work as fine sowing, quilting, knit ting, cooking. &c., as naturally as a girl would. In fact, from the age of twelve he did all of his mother's sewing, and continually protested against wearing men's clothes. The work of a woman was more natural to him than that of a man, and he would always show his feminine disposition in such little actions as riding side saddle, &c. He would beg to be called Dixie, or by any girl's name, instead of Dick. The most wonderful part of the history of this strange being is, that at the very moment he was free he adopted the full garb of a woman and the name of Lizzie. By those with whom he was raised he was called Lizzie-Dick, but is most generally known by the name of Lizzie, and is now almost universally recognized as a woman by both the whites and the blacks of the county. His bedroom is always kept in the very neatest order, and in his dress he displays a rare taste seldem seen among negroes, and often "found wanting" in the fashionable belle of society. He evinces no disposition to talk of his situation, but simply says he is a woman, and considers it a non-debatable question. I know the reader will say, as did the writer, on first bearing of this wonderful being, that he is hermaphroditical, innatic, or a monomaniae on this one subject; but the above two gentlemen will corroborate the statement that the former is not the case, and that there is not a brighter or more intelligent negro in the county. This is probably another case of man turning to woman as was going the rounds of the press a year or two ago; but my object being simply to give above facts, I will leave the "whys and wherefores" for wiser heads than that of your friend.
