The Strasbourg Cathedral.

As everything about Strasbourg will be. read with interest, we feel sure that the following from the Dublin Irishman will prove acceptable to our readers:

Halt! What marvel of masonry is that? Mangar sang, "The Dome—the Dome of Cologne!" but he might have spared a verse township of Chest, to meet at the School House Mangar sang, "The Dome-the Dome of for the minster of Strausbourg. See its spire, how it flies aloft to the infinite blue of the skies! Thousands of slaves cemented with their blood the building of the great Pyramid, that menster memorial of man,

But uplift the eyes and gaze. Over a score of feet is it excelled by this surpassing spire, which the free hands of men raised piously to the honor of God. It is 64 feet higher than the vaunted tower of St. Paul's, and about four and a half times higher than that dwarfish pillar to the sanguinary adulterer, Nelson, your streets have been disgraced with. It notoriously destroys the vast beauty of Sackville street. Paying fifteen centimes to the astonished keeper, who has few visitors now, I mount to the platform. Having taken the precenttion to be provided with a note from the maire and governor, I was allowed to ascend the spire. It required strength of nerve, for the stone fretwork is so open and the supporting pillars so thin and wide that you might grow dizzy and topple down through all the stony network like a dizzy bird thr? the intervowen boughs of the forest. Under the carved resette where the spiral stair ends I stopped and eyed for a moment the inscrip tions on the walls; then I turned, but the next adventurous traveller may read beside the names of Stolberg, Goethe, Schlosser and Hereer, the unassuming but not undistinguished appellation of M. Blarney de la Blacene

What a frosted network of stone masonry -what "fr zen music"-is this wonderful cathedral, which took centuries in its I vilding, yet whose chiselling looks as sharp, as distinct as though hewn a year ago; and before I pass from it I must have one glance at yonder wondrous and famous clock in the south transept. Just three hundred years ago, come next year, it was made by some miraculously patient man, and went for many a generation to the delight of youth and age. But it stood still for half a century, and a generation noust have died knowing it only by the tradition of its fame. All honor to Schwilge-poetic name !- who, brave Strasbourgher burgher as he was, devoted himself to set it agoing again. For a-go it did gowith its figures coming out to toll the hours -to show the day of the week-the day of the month—the month of the year—the year itself, and many another epoch! It is noon-out come all the figures-old men, young men, maids and children-to make a glorious chiming. A single beautiful pillar, ornamented with statues, supports the parts of the courch where it is placed, and above the Gothic border running along the wall, stands the statue of the architect of the cathedral, Erwin of Steinbach.

Let me moralize. Printer!- In this city, some four and a half centuries ago, the first attempt at printing was made. Guttemberg tried it here, and Peter Schoeffer, who helped him when he crossed to Mayence, and improved by the easting of letters, was a citizen of this city. Come forth to the Herb market and admire David's noble statue to Guttemburg, in what is now Gutten,burg's 'place." Poor David! His corpse had a difficulty in crossing the frontier home, as you may know if you are a reader of Beranger or Father Prout's Re-what of a free liver.

A Curious Decision.—The Supreme Court of Pennsylvania has decided that where by negligence sparks from a locomomotive set fire to a warehouse near a railroad track, the railroad company is liable for the damage done by the fire, but strange to say the same tribunal also decides that if another house caught fire from the flames of the burning building set on fire by the locomotive, the owner of said premises has no remedy. The railroad company, it was held, was only responsible to the first person, who by the negligence of the railroad company's servants had his property set on fire and destroyed; but although the second sufferer was injured by precisely the same reason, because the fire kindled by the locomotive spread to him, he had no ray and to him he is held on the day of any election, the account highest number of votes for finspector shall not attend on the day of any election, the account highest number of votes for finspector shall not attend on the day of any election, the account highest number of votes for have received the highest number of votes for inspector shall not attend on the day of any election, th because the fire kindled by the locomotive

"Not yet, my liege," Saxe juterposed, "the Irish through remain."

"Lord Clare," he says, "you have your wish—there are your Saxon foes."

The marshal almost smiles to see, so furiously he goes.

Well, here is Marshal Saxe in marble calmly descending into the grave, whilst the fair form of France yearningly seeks to detain him and to stay the menacing attitude of death. Saxe was a Protestant, and somewhat of a free liver.
