Divorced on the Desert, and a Meeting after Twenty Years.

One of the pioneers in California emigration, who went across the plains in 1849, tells this story, that began on the journey and has just ended in San Fran cisco:

When the train, of which the narrator, now in Nevada, was a member, was encamped on the Humboldt where the Lessen trail intersects the Carson track of travel. he visited the tent of a family consisting of an elderly couple and one child, a daughter of 14 or 15. The old lady was sitting on a pile of blankets under the canvas, encouraging a most determined attack of the 'suiks,' while the masculine head of affairs had planted himself on the wooden tongue, and was sucking his pipe as though he expected to remain there for ever.

A single glance developed the difficulty in that little train of one wagon and three persons, and that it had attained a point of quiet desperation beyond the reach of peaceful adjustment. Three days before they had pitched their tent at the forks of the road. and as they couldn't agree upon the route by which to enter California, there they had remained. The husband had expressed a preference for the Carson road, an i the wife for the Lessen; and neither would yield. The wife declared she would remain all winter; the husband said he would be pleased to prolong the sojourn through the summer following.

On the morning of the fourth day the wife broke a sullen silence of 36 hours by proposing a division of the property, which consisted of two yoke of oxen, one wagon, camp furniture, a small quantity of provisions, and $12 in silver. The proposal was ac-cepted; and forthwith the "plunder" was divided, leaving the wagon to the old man. and the daughter to the mother. The latter exchanged with a neighboring train the cattle belonging to her for a pony and pack saddle, and piling her daughter and her portion of the dividend spoil upon the animal, she resolutely started across the desert by the Lessen trail, while the old man silently yoked his cattle and took the other route.

Of course both parties reached California in safety. We say "of course," for it is scarcely possible that any obstacle, death included, could have interfered with stbbornness so sublime. Arriving in Sacramento, with her daughter, the old lady readily found employment--tor women were less plentiful than now-and subsequently opened a boarding house, and in a few years amassed a handsome fortune. Two years ago she went to San Francisco, and the daughter, whose education had not been neglected, was married to one of the most substantial citizens.

And what had become of the old man ? The wife had not seen or heard of him since they parted on the Humboldt. They had lived happily together for years, and she sometimes reproached herself for the wilfulness that separated them after so long a pilgrimage together. But he was not dead. We cannot trace his course in California, however. All we know of him is, that fortune had not smiled upon him, and that for cottage in the southern part of the city, he observed a lady in the hall, and stopped to offer his merchandise. As he stopped upon the threshold the lady approached, and the old man raised his eyes and dropped his basket; and no wonder, either, for she was his wife, his "old woman !" She recognized him, and throwing up her arms in amazement, exclaimed :

"Great God ! John, is that you ?" "All that is left of me," replied the old man. With extended arms they approached. she, with a look that might have been constraed into earnestness, "how do you find the Carson road ?" "Miserable, Sukey, miserable," replied the old man; "full of sand and alkali." "Then I was right, John ?" she continued, inquiringly. "You were, Sukey." "That's enough," said she, throwing her arms around the old man's neck ; "that's enough John ;" and the old couple, strangely sundered, were reunited.
