* RENAL AFFECTIONS.

The frequency of Kidney affections, and the many completelas arising from disease of the Urinary Organs, give occasion for much study and investigation of those difficulties. The old and the young, the high and the low, are all more or less subject to these troublesome affect-tions; from the diabetes of intanis to the pout-and gravei of old age—the much exposed labor-er at his toil to the laximous liver at his case. From the very nature of our peculiar system of practice, we have had perhaps more experi-ence in the treatment of these affections than usually falls to the lot of any practitioner in the name time. And it is in these affections more than any other that an examination of the urine is required, in order to understand the true instare of the disease. All urinary difficulties do not arise from gravel, nor do all gravelly indications arise from affection of the Kidneys, and it is by an examination of the unine alone that these facts are to be verified
