Interesting Facts for Business Men. 1871.

S. S. Preker, noted as a skillful penman, viltes to the New York Mail concerning "signature experts," the occasion being the late "Taylor will case," which turned in a great measure on the genuineness of the testutor's eignature :

More than twenty years ago, in Cincinnati, I copied the Declaration of Independence, spending fac similes of the signers' names. Mr. Thomas Stevens, at the same time editor of the Cincinnati Atlas, took occasion, in a plearant way, to doubt my assertion that I had copied the signatures with a pen. To convince him, I asked him to write his name on a sheet of paper, which he did. I immedistely wrote ten copies of his signature shove and below the original, and handed him the paper to select his own. After a careful examination he relected one as his wn. He was wrong. He tried again and again, with the same result, and finally, by mere guesa work, he hit on the right one. And it is a remarkable fact that after he had really discovered his own he could see the most astounding absurdities in all the others.

Some six years ago, I was speaking with n well-known publisher of this city, who sat at his desk signing some checks that the Odd Stove Plates and Grates, &c., for rebook-keeper had prepared for him. The pairs, on hand for the Stoves I sell ; others rignature was of the firm, and was a peculiar will be ordered when wanted. Particular one, as he wrote it. I casually remarked that it was an elegant signature for a forger. He promptly responded that there was no terger that could sign that name so as to deceive him.

"O, yes, there is," said I.

"Where is he?"

"He is standing at your elbow." you can imitate that signature so that I cannot detect the forgery ?" "I mean to say," said I, "that I think I can do it, and am willing to try it." "If you will write that signature," he re- SUGAR KETTLES AND CAULDRONS plied, "so that I cannot detect it from my own, I will-" "There, there, don't be rash; I should dislike to take advantage of your present nature at the top of that letter sheet, we'll see what a little impudence can do."

He did as requested. I took the shoot and went to the book keeper's desk. Here I exchanged it for another of the same kind, and in the same ralative position I limitated the adguature in a very free, careless way, not attempting a service copy, but preserving many new ones this Spring, I return my the characteristic strokes. I then very carenatures, all my own. These I took to the proprietor, and told him to select his own signature. With surprising little effort he pointed out the first signature, and at once began to criticise with severity my base imitations.

"Well," said I, "I will confess they are not as well done as I expected to do them, or as I could do them if my nerves were steady. But, really," said I, "don't you think if one of these signatures were placed at the bottom of your ordinary checks your bank would henor the check ?"

"I suppose," said I, "there is no doubt one of these lower signatures ?" said I. "No, not I. They bear forgery upon their very face."

"Well, how about the first one? No mistakes about this? You would readily cash a check with that signature?"

"Oh, yes, that is all right. Anybody who ever raw the deacon's sign manual could tell at a glance,"

So the deacon divided up his chagrin with the junior partner, and felt better or worse, I forget which.

The fact is, no man is safe in awearing to his signature-not even Horace Greeley to his own-for no man writes twice alike, although he may preserve the characteristics. And I would give very little for the testimony of "experts," unless backed by pretty strong colleteral evidence. It would not be difficult, ordinarily, to identify a body of writing, such as a page, or even a dozen lines, but to decide as to the genuiness of a depended upon it. A MACHINE has recently been perfected in London, with which a writer, using a pen in the usual manner, can at the same time, produce a duplicate so small as to be invisible to the naked eye, yet so distinct that a microscope will reveal every line and dot .-A most useful application of the apparates will be for the prevention of forgery, as private marks can be made, on notes and securities, legible under microscopic power, but which no imitator could see or even suspect the presence of. The laveutor, a Mr. Peters. Cor. Liberty and Sixth Sts., states that the entire contents of the Bible can, with the help of this machine, be writ-

The following little story, with its moral, though written for the Macon (Georgia) Telegraph, is quite too good to be enjoyed by the

I knew a man, he lived in Jones-Which Jores is a countr of red hills and stones; And he lived pretty much by getting of loans, And his mules were nothing but skin and bones, And his hogs were flat as his corn bread pones,

And he had 'bout a thousand acres of land. This man-and his name was also Jones-He swore that he'd leave them old red hills and

For he couldn't make nothing but yellowish cotton. And little of that, for his fences were rotten. And what little cotton he had was boughten,

And he couldn't get a living from the land. And the longer he swore the madder he got, And he rose and he walked to the stable lot, And he hallooed to Tom to come there and For to emigrate somewhere where the land was

And to quit raising cock burs, thistles, and sich. And wasting their time on barren land. So him and Tom they hiched up their mules. Protesting that folks were mighty big fools

I'hat 'ud stay in Georgia their lifetime out, Jest scratching a living, when all of them mought Get places in Texas where cotton would sprout By the time you could plant it in the land. And he drove by a house where a man named

Was living, not far from the edge of the town, And he bantered Brown to buy his place, And said that seeing that sheriffs were hard to Two dollars an acre would get the land. They closed at a dollar and fifty cents. And Jones he bought him a wagon and tents,

And loaded his corn, and his women, and truck, And moved to Texas, which it took His entire pile, with the best of luck, To get there and get him a little land.

But Brown moved out on the old Jones farm-And he rolled up his breeches and bared his And he picked all the rocks from off the ground, And he rooted it up and plonghed it down, And sowed his corn and wheat in the land.

Five years glid by, and Brown, one day, (Who ger so fat that he wouldn't weigh,) Was a sitting down, sorter lazily, To the bulliest dinner you ever see, When one of his children jumped up on his knee And says, "Yan's Jones, which you bought his land."

And there was Jones standing out at the fence, And he hadn't no wagon, nor mules, nor tents, For he had left Texas afoot and come To Georgia to see if he couldn't get some Employment, and he was looking as humble

As if he had never owned any land. But Brown he asked him in, and he set Him down to his victuals smoking hot, And when he had filled bimself and the floor, Brown looked at him sharp and rove and swore That "whether men's land was rich or poor, There was more in the man than there was in the land."

A LONG NOSED, thin shanked old maid appeared at the door of a farmer's house in Iowa the other day, and wanted the farmer's wife to subscribe to some women's newspaper and sign a petition for woman suffrage. The wife called out: "Charles, Tom, Richard, Lucy, Jane!" and was soon surrounded by a crowd of to her visitor and said: "Have you any DECE AND BOX STORE of these?" "No," was the sharp reply. "Then," replied the buxom wife, "go get a few, and afterwards come to me about women's rights, if you feel like it."

Is a cat doth meet a cat upon the garden wall, and if a cat doth greet a cat, oh! need they both to squall? Every Tommy has his Tabby, walking on the wall, and yet she welcomes his approach by an unearthly vawl. And if a kitten wish to court upon the garden wall, why don't he sit and sweetly smile, and not stand up and bawl, and lift his precious back up high, and show his teeth and moan, as if 'twere colic more than love that made the "feller" groan ?

A VERMONTER, who was lifted over a fance by the horns of a neighbor's bull, has recovered three dollars damages, the jury taking the ground that the fellow was going that way anyhow, and his torn corduroys, were already well worn, three dollars was enough.

These Pills are the most delightfully pleasant purgative, superceding castor oil, sails, magne-sia, etc. There is nothing more acceptable to the stomach. They give tone, and cause neither nausea nor griping pains. They are composed of the FINEST INGREDIENTS.
