Dear Freeman-Mr. Maggie gives a definition of purgatory. His definition, however, is scan-dalously false, as can be seen by the following, which is the true definition of the Church:

"There is a purgatory, and the souls detained there are helped by the prayers of the faithful, opened and particularly by the acceptable sacrifice of the altar." This definition is taken from the Council of Trent, and contains the real belief Rare Styles Shawls and Sacks, of the Church about purgatory. Now, dear reader, is there anything in the definition about silver or gold, as has been alleged by Mr. Mag-gie? Am I not justified in reparding that man as a base calumniator who misrepresents facts for his own degraded purposes? Can any con-fidence be reposed in such a signderer, who thus tries to impose on the public by bearing false witness against his neighbor? But what could be expected from one who conceals himself be neath the garb of a woman?

The fellow presumptously assumes that the Scriptures teach nothing about the doctrine of purgatory. Were this true, as it is not, the ar-gument that might be deduced from it would be merely negative, and insufficient to make out his case. Let him refer me to such a text as this; "There is no purgators" and then he as this: "There is no purgatory,"-and then he will give positive proof; but until he does so. am I not as free to believe as he is to deny the existence of purgatory? Does he believe in nothing that is not clearly defined in the Scrip-tures? Why then does he observe Sunday as the Sabbath? Has he any authority for that? The man does not understand the Scriptures, for in them "are some things hard to be under tood, which the unlearned and unstable wrest to their own perdition.

I hold that the Scriptures contain the doctrine of purgatory, and I will now show this, not by mere assertion, as he would show the contrary mere assertion, as he would show the contrary, but by producing texts which can speak for themselves. "It is therefore a holy and a whole-some thought to pray for the dead that they may be loosed from their sins."—II. Macc., XIL, 46. Now man is not loosed from sin in hell, for out of it there is no redemption ; nor in heaven, for nothing defied enters there. Where then?— Evidently in a third place. "The beggar died and was carried by angels into Abraham's bosom?" —Luke XVI., 22. What was Abraham's bosom? Not hell; neither was it heaven, as in that case Not hell; neither was it heaven, as in that case Dives would have appealed directly to God, and not to Lazarus. "Christ died for our sins, being put to death in the flesh, but enlivened in the spirit, in which also coming he preached to these spirits that were in prison." -I. Peter, III., 19. Was this prison heaven? Heaven is not a prison. Was it hell? No man believes that. "The day of It field No man believes that. "The day of the Lord shall be revealed by fire, and the fire shall try every man's work, of what sort it is. If any man's work burn, he shall suffer loss, but he knows self shall be saved so as by fire."-1. Cor., HIL, 13, 15. Will man suffer in the fire of heil and then be saved? No, for out of hell there is no re-demption. Where then? Not in heaven, for desiption. Where then? Not in heaven, for no one is punished there, but in a third place, which the language of the Apostle evidently contemplates. "He that speakely against the Holy Ghost can be forgiven neither in this world nor in the world to come."—Math. XIL, 32. This shows that sins can be forgiven in the next world, and thus points to a middle state where some sould suffer for a time before they can go some souls suffer for a time before they can go to heaven.

But let us refer to the early Christians on this polat, for their belief should throw light on the question. Tertullian lived in the age next to the Apostles, and tells us that a pious widow "prayed for the soul of her husband, and begod refreshment for him," St. Cyprian lived nearly in the the same age, and the comparison he draws between heaven and purgatory must strike the reader. "It is onething," he says, "to be waiting for parden, and another to altain to alory-one thing to be sent to prison, and not t gory—one thing to be sent to prison, dua not to go from thence till the last farthing is paid, and another to receive immediately the researd of faith and virtue—one thing to suffer lengthened tor-ments for sin, and to be chastised and purified for ments for sta, and to be chastised and purified for a long time in that fire." I could give other ex-tracts equally strong, but I wish to be brief. Can the would-be female furnish any evidence from the early Christians against the doctrine of purgatory? No, dear reader. The only proof he can give is misrepresentation and falsehood. The Catholics of Summerhill town-ship, can understand the spirit that animates ship can understand the spirit that animates this man towards themselves and their holy re-ligion, and should therefore avoid so low a character with the utmost care.
