> MYSTERIOUS SUICIDE IN PITTSBURGH. - A lady about thirty years of age, of handsome face and figure, and who registered her name simply as Mrs. Clark, of Huntingdon, Pa., committed suicide by hanging herself to a bed-post at the Union Depot Hotel, Pittsburgh, on Sunday morning last. When discovered life was not altogether extinct, but it was found impossible to resuscitate her. She had deposited $365 at the hotel office the day previous, besides which a valuable gold watch and chain, fine jewelry profusion, pawn tickets to the value of $415, and other valuables were found in her possession. A copy of a prayer claiming to have been found in the tomb of our Lord, was also among her effects, and has been accepted as indicative of her religious faith.

> P. S. Since the above was in type we learn from the Huntingdon Globe that Mrs. Clark was a respectable married woman who resided at Fairplay, Bedford county, and her husband says she was subject to fits of derangement, during one of which she no doubt committed self-murder. She left home last week for the avowed purpose of visiting Huntingdon to see some person about building a house. The husband of the unfortunate woman has gone to Pittsburgh to reclaim the body.

GEORGE J. BOLTON .-- In the long list of successful and eminently popular hotel proprietors of the present day, no name stands out more prominently than the one which heads this article, and none is mentioned with greater praise. As proprietor of the Bolton House, Harrisburg, the Washington Hotel, Philadelphia, and the Columbia House, Cape May, all first class and well patronized hotels, Mr. Bolton has won a distinction in the business that none excel and but few enjoy, and we venture to say that there is scarcely a reader of our paper who has not either partaken of the bospitality or heard favorable mention made at least of one or other of these hotels. All of them are unexcelled and all bear testimony to Mr. Bolton's ability "to keep a hotel." Of the Columbia House at Cape May, now that a visit to the sea shore is just in order, we desire especially to say a good word. We have never been at Cape May, it is true, but it is none the less known to us that the Columbia House is unsurpassed, if indeed equalled, by any botel at that favorite watering place. In all its appointments it is without a superior -- a desirable location, a good shade, an excellent bathing beach, good water, a first class table, unexceptionable treatment, and moderate charges being its leading attractions. If you have leisure, and the money to spare, dear reader, now is the time to visit Cape May and the Columbia House is the right place to hang up your hat and make yourself at home.

A SPLENDID WORK OF ART .- We acknowledge with pleasure the receipt from Messrs. Collins & M. Leester, the well known and very successful Philadelphia type founders, of a copy of their recently issued "Specimen Book." is a most exquisite work of art, and while it displays in pleasing profusion the beautiful and superb types manufactured at that renowned establishment, of which there is an almost innumerable variety, it also gives unmistakable evidence of great care, labor and judgment in its preparation and arrangement, and evinces throughout the brilliant genius and masterly taste of the talented and gentlemanly manager of the foundry, Mr. Eugene H. Munday. We hope those who owe us will, by paying us our purchases from this beautiful book, and thus render it as useful as it is already ornamental to our office. Our delinquent patrons can and should furnish the means to make the FREEMAN one of the handsomest papers published, and we appeal to their local pride and sense of justice to do so, now that we have the chance to select at home, if need be, the best and most desirable material for that purpose.

Is it Rient?-The following appeal for money is not without humor and abounds in much truth. It appeared in the Easton Argus about forty-two years ago, but is not by any means out of date: "We have many subscri bers who have paid us nothing. Do such people think we can live on beach bark, like a Cossack's horse, or grow fat by inhaling the west wind? Do they suppose that the Female Charitable Society supplies us with clothes?-Do they suppose that paper, type, ink, fuel and their reward. What say you, friends of the many other costly and necessary articles are sent us by an unknown and invisible hand?-Whatever Dr. Faustus might have done, the black art of modern printers has no such magic in it. When hungry we have no time to fish or hunt, and it would be impious to expect a sheet full of good things to be miraculously let down from the heavens by the four corners, as in the case of Peter, and, as to being fed by ravens, it is more likely that the ravens will feed scantily upon us, unless we get some money shortly.

A REASONABLE REQUEST .- "Clara, I love but thee alone."-thus sighed the tender youth. "O, hear me, then, my passion own with trembling lips and earnest tone. Indeed, I speak the truth." He paused, the blush o'erspread her cheek: she let him draw her near: scarce for emotion could she speak, yet did she ask in accents meek, "Wilt shou take me to T. T. Spence's Photograph Gallery, in the rear of G. G. Owens' store, High street, Ebensburg, as reasonable a request could not but be complied with, a wedding followed as a matter of course. the happy pair had their pictures taken in the most exquisite style, for that is the way Spence does his work, and duly supplied with excursion tickets obtained from that gentleman, (see his advertisement,) they are now enjoying an extended wedding tour. Go thou and do likewise, at least in the matter of getting your pictures taken by Spence, the proficient artist."

DEATH OF ANNIE H. DUNCAN .- All who participated in the editorial excursion in June last, will learn with deep regret of the recent death of Miss Annie H. Duncan, the only child of Aug, Duncan, Esq., one of the editors of the Chambersburg Valley Spirit, who was with her father at the democratic editorial convention at Bellefonte, and afterwards participated in the excursion to Watkins' Glen. Miss Duncan was a most amiable and estimable young lady, and was one of the happiest and most esteemed of all that happy and sociable throng. She possessed rare accomplishments both of mind and person, and was a favorite wherever known. She died of an attack of typhoid fever while on a visit to some relatives in Gettysburg. Her father, a worthy and honorable gentleman, has our earnest sympathy in his trying bereavement.

CHEAP MUSIC.-It is seldom that cheapness is associated with merit and real value, but we must make an exception in favor of Peress' MUSICAL MONTHLY. This valuable work comes to us regularly each month, overflowing with choice new music-some fifteen pieces in every number. It is printed from 36 full size music places, neatly bound, and sells for the modest sum of 30 cents. Volume VIII. began with the July number : and the publisher offers to Horse Fair at Lorerro.-We have been send two conies-July and August-for 50 cents. Address J. L. Perens, 599 Broadway. New York. Think of it ! 30 pieces of good music for 50 cents.

> ENLARGED AND IMPROVED.-There is not a man, woman or child in the country who knows "Uncle Jake" Zeigler, of the Butter Herald, but will rejoice to learn that he is now the owner of a power press and an entire new outfit of types, and that he has enlarged his paper to a types, and that he has enlarged his paper to a nine column paged sheet and of course beautified it throughout with the new material referred to. He has adorned it with a handsome scroll head which reads, "Zeigler's Butler Herald," and is a fit crown for such an elegant gotten-up journal. In its politics the Herald is democratic to the core, and in the advocacy of which principles it is as efficient and able as its editor is gentlemanly, honorable and worthy of success.

JOHNSTOWN, July 31, 1871; Dear Freeman-James Flanagan, son of John Flanagan, Esq., one of the nominees for Associate Judge, who has been in the far west for several years, has just returned to his home in this place and purposes remaining until Octo-ber. He seems to bear the wear of travel and excitement bravely, for he looks quite well. We wish him a pleasant visit to his old home. It is little more than one month since Mr. Black was killed on the Connelsville railroad and his mutilated remains brought home and interred here. On last Friday another victim was brought to this place and buried. The name of the deceased was Louis Snowden, a promising young man, aged about nineteen years. He was killed near Pittsburgh, on the Connelsville railroad, just as the train was leav-ing the city. He had sprained his ankle a few days before, and this may have been the cause of his falling from the cars. He leaves a broth-er and sister to mourn his untimely and tragic

The school directors of Woodvale have placed new fashionable cherry desks in their school house, bought outline maps and new school cards, and renovated the blackboard. They also repaired the house, having it plastered in the new, till it looks as white as a sheet of paper, Wild cat water has also been introduced, and other improvements made. Considering that this school district is only two months old, this is doing the thing up brown. They are energetic men, and, with the hearty co-operation of the people and the teacher, the school must Mr. Henry Levy, formerly a merchant of this place, but who has been absent for sixteen years, returned to Johnstown the other day, looking well and hearty. He has been all through the west-has seen all the elephantsand now returns to remain. He purposes to set up business here. He was a very popular merchant while doing business here in 1852 to 1855. We wish him good luck, first, because he deserves it, and, second because he presented to us a nice Indian smoke pipe and a bead case to keep it in. It is a chief's pipe, and made out of yellow stone—a very precious stone found in some parts of the west. Mr. Levy and I never had a hatchet to bury, but we both smoked the pipe of peace together.

Both these gentle-men are good business men and I doubt not that they will be useful in this as in their other pursuits in this community. We wish them lots of good luck and many customers, both in the auction and the stove and tinware busiess, for, be it remembered, they have not reinquished the business of making tinware and selling everything that tinners and stove deal-

ADVERTISING AGENCIES .- It is a fact that all those persons doing a business which requires extensive advertising, and who from the mode of conducting it are able to arrive at a close approximation of the results produced by each separate investment in this way, are universal in the opinion that better contracts can be seoured through a well established advertising agency like that of Geo. P. Rowell & Co., New York, than can be obtained from publishers direct, no matter how familiar with rates and papers the advertiser may be. It stands to reason that an agency controlling patronage to the extent of from fifty to one hundred thousand dollars per month should be able to secure favors which would not be accorded to any mere individual, even if we omit entirely the benefits which they must derive from their extensive experience. - Exchange.

Our heroine sat on a mossy stone, beneath an ancient elm, gazing upon the slippery rip-ples of the crystal stream which sped past her slippered feet. The New York Riots Again-A Sensible View of the Subject. My Dear Freeman.—The real point to be taken into consideration has been overlooked by most of those who have written or spoken upon the recent disturbances in New York. Our country is being rapidly filled up by persons coming from every quarter of the globe. We have Englishmen and Irishmen, Germans and Frenchinen, Swedes and Poles, Russians and Chinese, Africans and Japanese, Spaniards and Italians, Norwegians and Danes. Coming from different countries, it is but natural that these men should still feel an attachment to their native lands—that they should still take a deep interest in the welfare of their respective nationalities—that they should still be more or less influenced by their old national projudices and predilections. and predilections.

"Calum non animam mutaut qui trans mare arrunt." Freely translated, this means crossing the ocean does not change our feelings.

A German, though a citizen of the United States, naturally felt an interest in his native land and rejoiced as he read of its onward and steady progress to victory during the late war. Just as naturally did Frenchmen grieve over the misfortunes that laid waste their beautiful land, and hope that ere long a better fate would befall it. In like manner, if (which God forbid) another war should enkindle its devour-ing flames and hurry Great Britain and Prussia into a struggle, Englishmen would rejoice over the success or weep over the defeat of their native land, whereas a German would watch with eagerness every movement of the Pryssian armies and his spirit would rise and fall with the side on which they were borne to victory. This sympathy a man feels for the land of his birth is very well in its own place, but what that place is should not be forgotten. Though coming from different quarters of the world, we are all here citizens of the United States Upon this soil we are free and we are equal. The Russian and the Pole are upon the same level-a high and ennebling level. To prince and peasant coming from abroad the title of American citizen is a proud and valued one. The Prussian has no more rights here than a Frenchman; each of them, however bitter the strife between their father lands, is an American citizen entitled to the same rights and privleges and possessed of an equal claim to their Inviolability.

Being, therefore, equal and citizens of one country, breathing the same pure air of free-dom, treading upon the same soil and enjoying a happiness having the same basis and secured by the same bulwarks, it should be their aim to suffer all old-world prejudices and animosities to be as completely laid saide as if the waves of the ocean they crossed when coming hither had been for them the waters of forgetfulness of all ut the ties of love and universal brotherhood. So, also, should it be the aim of our government, whether municipal, state, or general, to discountenance and, if attempted, put down every manifestation of national feelings that may be offensive to any, even the least, of our citizens. Otherwise the peace of the country will be endangered and its unity and consequent prosperity be put in peril.

Aside, therefore, of the bad taste shown in rejoicing over the defeat of the noble country that first stretched out a helping hand to our nation in its birth-threes, it was at variance with the harmony to be desired and cherished between our citizens to have public celebra-tions of the victory of the Prussians when there are in our midst so many who felt a sorrowing interest in the destiny of France. Even were there but one citizen of French descent, the violence done to his feelings would be serious and lasting in its consequences.

With equal injustice to the feelings of ar Irish-born citizen, and with equal peril to the pence of our country, is any celebration at-tended that has for its object to commemorate what he regards as a deep and abiding wrong to his native land. No matter whether the participants in the celebration be citizens or not, the event they commemorate was but one link of a heavy galling chain that weighs upon the down-trodden victims of treachery and barbarism. Such an event could be recalled to him by an Irishman only with feelings of sorrow for his country and of hatred for her oppressor.— To stir up and keep alive such feelings is to arouse into action passions not easily subdued and to lead to deeds from which disorder, strife, and bloodshed may ensue. What right, then, consistent with the unity, peace and happiness of our nation, can any Englishman have to offer such an insuit to a citizen of the United States? It is idle to appeal to the parades of and they would be tolerated only because it suited the interests of men in high places to alarm a rival government. No citizen has a right to hurt or trample upon the feelings of another citizen.

For this reason every right-minded citizen should and will applaud those who would pre-vent any such national celebration, whether in ing so they are supported by law or not; fo f the law does not exist it ought to exist, as it is the natural and necessary consequence of the relations in which we stand—foreign or native citizens—towards one another and towards our only real and most free and happy land. It should be the effort of our rulers, as it certainly is the spirit of our country, to cement most closely and firmly the elements of which our nation is composed and to exclude anything that would may the symmetry or lessen the strength of the noble structure the beauty and power of which win the admiration and command the respect of men in every clime and land. Whatever our hearts may feel, let our words and actions never show that we are anything but Americans, save to love our fellow men, be they white or black, red or yellow, from Europe or Asia, for beyond our boundaries live our fellow men, within our borders fellow citizens as well. CIVIS AMERICANUS.

THE REASON WHY .- The immediate cause of premature fading or blanching of the hair is an obstruction of the oil vessels which afford the coloring matter. The remote causes may be general ill health, trouble of mind, etc. Hence, in order to restore its natural color and beau-ty the oil vessels must be restored to their nor-mal condition. It is on this principle that NA-TURE'S HAIR RESTORATIVE is compounded, and it has proved a complete success, wherever faithfully applied. It is not a poisonous dye, consequently the effect is gradual, and in severe cases two or three bottles are necessary to produce the desired result. See adver-
