The following burlesque account of the result of Horace Greeley's election to the Presidency first appeared in the Philadelphia Sunday Dispatch, and is the best thing of the kind we have ever read ;

You ask me to tell you, my children, of the events which immediately preceded the destruction of the once great American Union, and the capture of the country by its present European rulers, and to say some thing of the causes which led to these deplorable results. I undertake the task with a Leavy heart, for when I revert that terri- FEED AND PROVISIONS, ble time, I cannot help contrasting our proud condition up to that year with the humilating position occupied now by the American people. The story is a short one: In the fall of 1872, Horace Greeley, the editor of a newspaper in New York, was elected President of the United States. The people voted for him because they thought he was an honest man. And so he was. But he was also vain and weak, and he entertained certain fanatical and preposterous notions-about agricultural matters, for instance-which he was determined to force upon the people at all hazards, and despite all opposition. He believed, among other things, that every man ought to go to the West to earn his bread, and long before he was chosen President he used to advise everybody to move to that region as a cure for all diseases that could befall the human family.

As soon as he reached the Executive Mansion, which we used to call the White House, President Greeley organized an army of 200. 000 men, and proceeded to drive the entire population of the seaboard cities westward at the point of the bayonet. The utmost violence was used. These who resisted were shot down, and their dead bodies were car- Near Pa. R. R. Depot, Johnstown, Pa., ried off to a national factory which the President had established for making some kind of fantastical fertilizer. All the large cities of the east were depopulated, and the towns were entirely empty. The army swept before it millions of men, women and children, until the vast plains west of Kansas were reached, when the pursuit stopped and the army was drawn up in a continuous line, with orders to shoot any one who attempted to visit the east. Of course hundreds of thousands of these poor creatures perished from starvation. This seemed to frighten President Greeley and he sent a message to Congress recommending that seven thous and volumes of his book entitled, "What I know About Farming," should be voted for the relief of the sturying sufferers. This was done, and farming implements and seeds were supplied, and then the millions of wretched outcasts made an effort to till the ground. Of the result of this I will speak In the meantime the President was doing infinite harm to the country in another way. His handwriting was so fearfully and wonderfully bad that no living man could read it. And so he sent his first annual message to Congress-the document was devoted wholly to the tariff and agriculture-a sentence appeared which subsequently was ascertained to be "Large cultivation of rutabaga and beans in the only hope of the American nation, I am sure." The printer not being able to interpret this, put it in the following form, in which it went to the world: "The Czar of Russia could not keep clean if he washed himself with the whole Atlantic ocean a day!" This perversion of the message was immediately telegraphed to Russia by the Russian Minister, and the Czar was so indignant that he immediately declared war. Just at this time President Greeley undertook to write a letter to Prince Bismark upon the subject of the potato rot, and after giving his views at great length, he concluded that if the Emperor William said that subsoil plowing was not good for light soils, or that guano was better than bone dust, he was "a liar, a villain and a slave!" Of course the Emperor also immediately declared war, and became an ally of Russia and England, against which latter country June 10, 1869. Mr. Greeley had actually begue hostilitles already, because the Queen, in her speech from the throne, declared the Tribune's advocacy of a tariff on pig iron incendiary, and calculated to disturb the peace of nations.

Unhappily this was not the full measure of our disasters. The President had sent to the Emperor of Austria a copy of his book, "What I know," etc., with his autograph upon a fly leaf. The Emperor mistook the signature for a caricature of the Austrian eagle, and he readily joined in the war against the United States, while France was provoked to the same act by the fact that when the French Mintster came to call upon Mr. Greeley to present his credentials, the the time, not comprehending the French language, mistook the embassador for a beggar, and, without looking up, handed him a quarter and an order for a clean shirt, and said to him, "Go West, young man-go West!" So all these nations joined in making war upon the United States. They swooped down upon our coasts and landed without opposition, for those exposed portions of our unhappy country were absolutely deserted.

The President was afraid to call the army away from Kansas at first, for fear the outraged people upon the plains would come east in spite of him. But at last he did summon the army to his aid, and it moved to meet the enemy. It was to late. Before the troops reached Cincinnati the enemy had seized Washington, and the country east of Ohio, and had hung the President, the Cabinet and every member of Congress. The army disbanded in alarm, and the invaders moved to the Far West, where they found the population dying or starving, because they had followed the advice of Greeley's book, to "try for our first crop to raise limes; and don't plant more than a bushel of quicklime in a hill!" Of course these wretched people were at the mercy of the enemy, who -to his credit be it said-treated them kindly, fed them and brought them back to their old homes. You know what followed-how Prince Frederick William of Prussia ascended the American throne, and the other humiliations that ensued. It was a fearful blow at Republicanism-a blow from which it can never recover. It made as who were freemen, a nation of slaves. It was all the result of our blind confidence in a misguided old man, who thought himself a philosopher, but who was actually a fool. May heaven preserve you, my children, from the remorse I feel when I remember that I voted for that bucolic old editor.

Animal Teaching.

We have all witnessed in our time, says Land and Water, the astonishing performance of certain animals, birds, and fishes which were trained for the purpose of exhibition; but the majority of these, though they served to prove the possibility of a higher training and a more useful one, yet in themselves they exhibited a lamen table amount of waste power.

Long years before the American Rarey's name was heard as a "horse tamer," a secret existed, as a family heirloom, among a sect of the O Sullivans in the south of Ireland. This family was known as "The Whisperers," and they possessed the power of rendering as quiet as a lamb the most stubborn and unmanageable horse that ever existed. Whether they did anything more to the horse than breathe into his nostrils, we know not; but by doing this and by kind soothing, and other ways known to themselves-And any Cooking Stove desired I will get they effected their purpose and ret ined fame. Putting the question of drugs, or other stimulants, or other fascinating means aside, and coming to the point of pure and unadulterated domestication and teaching, perhaps there was not one person in modern times achieved so much success in animal teaching as S. Bissett. This man was an humble shocmaker. He was born in Scotland in 1721, but he afterward removed to London, where he married a woman who brought him some property; then turning broker, he accumulated money until the year 1759, when his attention was turned to the training and teaching of animals, birds and fishes. He was led to this new study on reading an account of a remarkable horse-show at a fair at St. Germair 8. Bissett bought a horse and dog, and succeeded beyond his expectations in teaching them to perform various feats. He next purchased two monkeys, which he taught to dance and tumble on a rope, and one would hold a candle in one paw and turn the barrel organ with the other, while his compan ion danced. He next taught three cats to do many wonderful things, to sit before music-books, and squall notes pitched to different keys. He advertised a 'Cat's Opera" in the Haymarket, and successfully carried out his programme, the cats accurately fulfilling all their parts. He pocketed some thousands by these performances. He next taught a leveret, and several other species of birds, to spell the name of any person in company, and to distinguish the hour of the day or night. Six turkey cocks were next rendered amenable to a country dance, and, after six months' teaching, he trained a ally that he has made a great reduction in turtle to fetch and carry like a dog, and, prices to CASH BUYERS. My stock will having chalked the floor and blackened consist, in part, of Cooking, Parlor and Heat- its claws, he made it trace out the name of any given person in the company.

> ONE of the good things in Artemus Ward's book is a serio-comic conversation which puzzled a female teacher in a steamboat cabin. We quote:

How People Spoil Good Local 5 .-The Charlottesville Chronicle tells the story thusly: "Salmon was discharged from custody instead of being hung, cheating us directly out of a first class local of two columns. Then a man going down Main street had his horse frightened and instead of letting him run and break the buggy all to pieces and cripple himself, he stopped him before he even got under good headway. And another gentleman, one of our first citizens, riding a fine horse on one of the chief thoroughfares of the town yesterday, undertook to make him pass a little pile of rubbish that was burning in the street. The horse refused to go and backed to the pavement, where a number of little boys and girls were playing -Now, this man, instead of spurring the horse and making him kick two or three of the little girls and boys over, as any spirited man should have done, he jumped down and led the horse without latting him kick a single one. How is the local columns of a paper to be sustained as long as this state of things exists?"

A CORRESPONDENT of the Albany Journal tells the following big story about what two of his friends said they saw one day : "They saw a wasp riding on a green worm one and a half inches long. How far they had ridden they did not know, but after they saw him they watched him until he had ridden twenty-five feet. Occasionally the worm would stop, lie motionless as though he was dead, when the wasp, after a little, would spur him up, and then the worm would go on. The wasp kept the worm in as direct a course as he could. After a while the worm stopped and the wasp dismounted and ran quickly and removed a little stone or piece of ground about two inches from where the worm lay, and then seizing the worm by the head, drew it into the hole. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Among the great discoveries of modern science, few are of more real value to mankind than this effectual remedy for all diseases of the Throat and Lungs. A vast throughout this and other countries, has shown that it does surely and effectually control them. The testimony of our best citizens, of all classes, establishes the fact, that CHERRY PECTORAL will and does relieve and cure the afflicting disorders of the Throat and Lungs beyond any other medicine. The most dangerous affections of the Pulmonary Organs yield to its power; and cases of Consumption, cured by this preparation, are public-ly known, so remarkable as hardly to be believed, were they not proven beyond dispute. As a remedy it is adequate, on which the public may rely for full protection. By curing Coughs, the forerunners of more serious disease, it saves unnumbered lives, and an amount of suffering not to be computed. It challenges trial, and convinces the most sceptical. Every family should keep it on hand as a protection against the early and unperceived attack of Pulmonary Affections, which are easily met at first, but which become incurable, and too often fatal, if neglected. Tender lungs need this defence; and it is unwise to be without it. As a safeguard to children, amid the distressing diseases which beset the Throat and Chest of childhood, Cherry Pectoral. invaluable; for, by its timely use, multitudes are rescued from premature graves, and sayed to the love and affection centred on them. It acts speedily and surely against ordinary colds, securing sound and health-restoring sleep. No will suffer troublesome Influenza and painful Bronchitis, when they know how easily v can be cured.

Originally the product of long, laborious, and successful chemical investigation, no cost or toil is spared in making every bottle in the utmost possible perfection. It may be confidently relied upon as possessing all the virtues it has ever exhibited, and capable of producing cures as memorable as the greatest it has ever effected. PREPARED BY
