Wentworth on Greeley-How His Mutton Prospects were Spelled-Attempt-ing to Grow Silk on Sheep. [From the Chicago Republican, Sept. 16th.]

A representative of the Republican, armed with a step-ladder, called at the Tremont Heuse vesterday, his object being to inter view Long John Wentworth upon political questions, and especially upon Mr. Greeley, the Presidency, and the wool crop. Mr. Wentworth invited the reporter to be seated when the following conversation endued : Reporter,-Good morning, Mr. Went-

Yes I have been suffering from s me linear feet of lumbago, but expect to be hearty again in a day or two.

R .- Mr. Wentworth, what do you thick of Horace Greeley ?

At these words a change overspread Mr. Wentworth's countenance, which grew dark with anger. Raising himself on his elbow with one prodigous effort, he replied, although his frame was racked with agony, "1'-n Mr. Greeley !"

The effort was too much, and he sank fainting on his couch. After some moments then amiably punching Mr. Wentworth had elapsed he resumed, in a voice of deep emotion:

"If there is in America a hell bound, a slave, and a swindler worthy of the gallows, chances for the Presidency ?' that hell-hound, that slave, and that swindler is Horace Greeley."

"But, Mr. Wentworlh, the great and good Greeley is a man of warm heart and charitable incluses. Knowing himself to have been the innocent cause of your misfortunes. he will doubtless come to your assistance, and you may be happy yet."

Mr. Wentworth smiled a bitter smile and handed our reporter an opened telegram which read as follows:
