OF EIGHTY PERSONS IN & SHINGLE MILL. FIFTY SEVEN BURNED TO DEATH.

The Door County Advocate contains a full account of the loss of life and property by the great fires in that county. Up to Suuday, 8th inst., fires had been raging through the towns of Brussels, Union, Gardner, Forestville, Clay Banks, Neswaupee, Sturgeon Bay, and Sevastopol, burning fences and timber, but leaving houses untouched. At nine o'clock on Sunday night a tornado of fire swept down from the southwest, beginning at Belgium settlement, in Brussels, sweeping through the town of Union and Gardner, the western part of Sevastopol, and down the east shore of the bay, consuming every building in its path.

At Williamson's shingle mill everything was burned, and the most awful destruction of human life ensued. Out of eighty persons found in a potato patch in the centre of a water. clearing; others were found scattered in various places, some in wells. Many were disfigured in a terrible manner, and in some cases beyond recognition.

This great destruction was the work of but fifteen minutes, and was the same torna do that burned Peshtigo and twelve hundred human beings.

A number of other loss s of life are reported ip other places. Twenty two were lurned at Brussels. There is scarcely a house or barn standing in the line of this storm of file. these who survive.

FROM AN EYE WITNESS OF THE BURNING OF VILLACES AND FORESTS IN WISCONSIN.

On Sunday night, Oct. 15th, Mr. Jas. B. Clark, of Detroit, was at Uniontown, Wis. Fires were blazing through the forests and along the prairies in every direction. At sundown there was a strong breeze, which at nine o'clock increased to a furious gale, blowing towards the lake. The whole surface of the country to the westward, eastward, and southward seemed to be one mass of flame, which almost reached to the lowering clouds, and rushed along at race horse speed. Even where Mr. Clark was the heat suddenly made a rush like the flash of a train for its intended purposes." of gunpowder, and swept in the shape of a crescent around the settlement. It is almost impossible to conceive the frightful rapidity. of the advance of the flames. The rushing fire seemed to cat up and annihilate the trees.

THE RUSH OF THE FIERY BLAST.

The roar of the blast was as loud as the largest in the village, and in the centre of the yard, midway between the house and barn, was a large but shallow well. Several of the neighbors were supplied with water from this fountain, and it is likely that in the conflagration, when all hope was cut off. the neighbors, insane with terror, thronged with one purpose to this well. The ordinary chain and wheel pump used in that place had been removed, and the wretched people had leaped into the well as the last refuge. Boards had been thrown down to prevent their being drowned ; but evidently the relentless fury of the fire drove them pell mell into the pit, to struggle with each other and die-some by drowning and others by fire and siff cation. None escaped. Thirtytwo bodies were found there. They were in every imaginable position; but the contors tions of their limbs and the agonized expression of their faces told the awful tale.

Traveling Instinct in Animals, The French "pigeon post" has recalled attention to a subject that has long had a deep interest for naturalists—the power or instinct animals exhibit of finding their may back to a spot from whence they may have been taken, by a road never before traversed by them.

Pigeons carrying messages or returning long distances to their "cotes," most certainly find their way back by means of their sight. This is evidenced by the fact of the long training required, and their inability or disinclination to fly during a fog. But this means of finding out a distant locality cat-not apply in the cases we are about a record :

At Vancouver's Island a gentleman hal a house on one side of Esquinalt Huby wherein he and his family resided. They had a favorite cat which was always majes great pet. It so happened that the page of the house had occasion to change his reidence to the other side of the harbor. distance in a straight line was quite a mis while to reach the house by making a cicuit of the harbor, a distance of quite in miles must be travelled, and that through Odd Stove Plates and Grates, &c., for re- dense forest of pines thickly undergrave pairs, on hand for the Stoves I sell; others with brushwood. When the family renews from one house to the other, pussy was had tened securely into a basket and takin in a boat across the harbor, and was not left of her prison until she was secured in a neg at her new residence. It is quite clear in this case the cat could not have seen anything of the route tolong by water from house to house. Strange an it may seem, she made her escape during b night, and, when on the day following her House Burner, with Glass Cone, for giving removal some of the family returned loras, more light than any other in nse. Also, the ticles left behind, there was pussy, somewight dirty and tir+d, but in perfect safety. Now she could only have reached the old residence SUGAR KETTLES AND CAULDRONS in two ways-either by swimming the has bor, which is by no means probable, or sha found her way through the forest, where she had never been before, and through thick underbrush, without any trail or path a Jobbing n Tin, Copper and Sheet-Iron, guide her; and what makes the matter far more wonderful is the fact that the cat must have passed close to an Indian village num which a large number of half-wild digt wea strange sound. Straining our eyes toward the fire-about seven miles distant-we could just discern something moving ; now it would appear like a black mass, then it would setarate into fragments, swaying to and fro. and bobbing up and down. It came toward us directly from the lurid wall of flame. So intense was the glace of light about us that our eyes were dazed ; they ran with water, and we could see only by constantly u-ing our handkerchief. At last we made out by sight and sound that the moving mass was a stampede of cattle and horses thundering ing along toward us away from the flames, bellowing, neighing and moaning as they galloped on. Finally they came ru h ng past with fearful speed, their eyeballs dilated and glaring with terror, and every motion betoking delirium of fright. Some had been badly burned, and must have plunged thro' a long space of flame in the desperate effort to escape.

A FAMILY'S PATE.

Following considerably behind came a solitary horse, panting and snorting and uta 'y exhausted. He was saddled and bridled, and, as we first thought, had a bag lashed to his back. As he came up we were startled at the sight of a young lad lying fallen over the animal's neck, the bridle wound around his hands, and the mane clinched by rhe fingers. Little effort was needed to stop the juded horse, and at once release the helps less boy. He wes taken into the house and all that we could do was done; but he had inhaled the smoke, and was seemingly dying. Some time elapsed, and he revived enough to speak. He told his name, Patrick Byrnes, and said :

"Father and mother and the children go into the wagon. I don't know what becap e of them. Everything is burned up. I am dying. Oh, is hell any worse than this ?''

The poor fellow lay in a critical condition when I left. The next morning we went to the settlement. The first house we came to was that of Patrick Byrnes, father of the lad before spoken of. It was a heap of ashes. The brick chimney, the cooking stove, and iron portions of farm tools were the only remnants of the place. The forest w. s bu nt down to the ground, the stumps only being left, smouldering and smoking Everything was hot. Even the road was laked and cracked by the heat.

ROASTED ON THE LOADSIDE.

About a mile further on we came to a hors rible spectacie. Alongside the road in a gully lay the bodies of six persons and two horses, reasted to a crisp. The iron tires of the wheels and braces and bolts of the wagon were scattered about. Here the fire had surrounded and engulfed them. Evidently the animais in their mad struggles had reared, plunged, and failen headlong from the road to where they died.

Mr. Byrnes was a native of Tipperary county, Ireland, and with his wife had been in America over thirty years. Formerly they lived in the Fourth Ward of New York, where he was employed as a cartman. Seventeen years ago he moved west, and by industry had accumulated a snug property .---He had five children, the clicst being eighteen and the youngest five years old.

A VILLAGE IN ASHES.

We hurried on. All along the road lay the carcasses of cattle, sheep, hogs and dogs burnt to crisp. The smaller animals were recently erected on Centre street, two doors almost entirely consumed. Now we came from High street. to the village. Nothing was left but piles of ashes smoking and smouldering. In the cellar of one house we found eight bodies. One of a man in a stooping position over that of a child, as though he died trying to ward off the flames. This was very likely the body of Mr. Williamson, the owner of

A RARE AND INTERESTING CASE-W chronicle the facts as we heard them of u of the most remarkable cases of the part aberration of the mental faculties, an 14 syncrasy as rare as it is interesting in a pla osophical point of view. A single hely her third decade, residing in this country of most respectable parentage and com tions, and in possession of amplements, be then as now living in Pennsylvania. Here a work published of which he is the auth BF House Spouting made, pain 'ed and put and has also read as they have appeared in time to time, several articles of his said a year ago, she fancied the Reverend referred to, had gone through a regula formal courtship (by letter), that she b accepted him, and the wedding day #14 fixed, not an early one to be sure, but never theless one agreed upon by the contral parties. This fancy grew in her min fixed and settled fact, and during the year she has been very industriously en ed in getting and preparing the thousa one things supposed to be indispensit lady's trosseau, and also having realf of the articles required in keeping b At the proper time she ordered an supply of elegant cakes, fruit, confee etc.; indeed omitted no particular riety of an elegant and bountiful fue the invitations were issued, and the us to the bridal eve, when all was read the bridegroom-he was hundreds away, and in blissful ignorance that b ing was so anxionsly looked for-his p so necessary to a continuation of the nies. So admirably had the lady at all her plans, so exactly and succes she executed !' em, that it was not very last moment that her relativ friends had reason to believe that she wa victim of an hallucination. She new that some accident, some dispensal Providence, prevented his coming at the appointed, but that he will surely co doubts not. This is such a case as it our sincere sympathies-although som OOK WELL TO YOUR teeling brutes may find it a source of jest and vulgar mirth. We may add the all other subjects her mind is as sound as a dollar .- Frederick Union. RATS have an unaccountable fondness
