LETTER FROM JOHNSTOWN.

JOHNSTOWN, April 3, 1872. DEAR FREEMAN-There have been several improvements made lately in post office mutters here. Fifty new boxes have been imported, in one solid block, and put in the other frame work of boxes. These new boxes have keys which unbbck said boxes from the outside, so that the owner can unlock his own box as men do the drawers. There are now fifty drawers and fifty boxes, and it is the intention to order as many new hoxes as can be sold at two collars per box There are about six hundred of the old fashioned boxes yet Another decided improvement is more help. Our P. M. has got a new assistant. And we like that assistant. That assistant does matters up very expeditions v and very kludly. We like to go to the post-office now. No scolding like there used to be.

Court opened last Monday, notwithstanding the quo warranto. The usual routine was gone through with It's like washing dishes-the same thing over every court-constables, returns, calling juries, charging juries, swearing juries, etc. We do not like to go to court. It ooks so queer to see one sinner trying another Some one predicted the greatest ice flood this spring that ever was. Never was a greater mistake If one had watched night and day be could not have seen the ice going away. It evaporated like the dew upon the flowers. The gradual thaw made the roads very muddv. Perhaps the roads were never in a worse condition since Adam and his frow moved out of Ecen and Paradise That flittin' of course

Dr. Emerson has removed to his new builds ing on Fortage street, next door to 'Squire Flattery's effice. He has laid in quite a large stock of medicines and looks like as if he meant business.

M. P Mengher has leased a house next door to Mrs Quinn's residence, on Franklin street, epposite M'Culioughs grocery, where he has opened un a rew book store. From appearan ces he must have over a thousand dollars worth of stock, chiefly religious works. We wish M P. M great success.

Geo T. Swank, clerk of the District Conet. was very agreeably surprized the other day by having a writ of quo warranto served on him at the instigntion of Josiah K. SCENE IN COURT. There was a scene in the District Court on Tuesday. A man who had been arrested for bigamy gave the court erier or tipstaff (Mark ey) some impudence. The Judge ordered his Popular Dry Goods Store, Nos. 113 and 115 Clinton Street, Johnstown, Pa. arrest, but it took about a dozen stalwart men to do that. Then, his wire-that is, one of them-kicked up a muss, and it took a dozen more to put her out-doers. Both went to the Ros Roy.

A PHOTOGRAPH ROMANCE.-In our issue of last week we published an article with above caption which no doubt proved interesting to our marriageable friends of both sexes—to the ladies, as showing low accident sometimes secures a desirable husband, and to the gentle men, as conveying a hint how to look up a wife. To those interested the story likewise had a moral, and in that moral is mixed up Spence's legant Photograph Gallery, the perfectly life- to. like pictures he knows so well how to execute, the exceedingly moderate prices at which he urnishes the best of work, and the but you know how it is yourself, and Spence will be glad to have you take the hint and then let him take your pictures-ail of yez.

Soltero's Respects to Tom A. Hawk:

SUMMERHILD TWP., March 30, 1872. Dear Freeman-The last issue of that delectable sheet, yelept the Cambria Herald, publishes an effusion from the vixorous pen of "Tom A. Hawk," in which the author, who fain would pass for a Summitrillian, after unnecessarily informing his readers that he will be thought impudent and presumptions for so doing, takes upon himself the task of reviewing the Freeman correspondents, and singles out "Soltero" as the first subject for his lucrubations. I am well pleased the part for although I am "done for" pleased thereat, for although I am "done for" as it is, how much worse would it have been for me had I been kept in suspense an entire week or more, racked in the meantime with the dread of certain doom awaiting me in the near future. True it is that "a fellow feeling makes us won-drons kind," as I have lately realized, for, altho writhing under the lash of T. A. H., my heart goes out none the less in sympathy to my broth-er correspondents, and especially to my warm friend and soon-to-be fellow sufferer, "Rob Roy," who doubtless will be the next to fall be-neath this reigntless will be the next to fall beneath this relentless "Tom A. Hawk. "Tom A. Hawk," who, in consideration of his utter disregard for veracity, should have signed himself either Tom Paine or Tom Pepper, goes for me in a style as little worthy of admiration as it is of imitation. After some reflections on my literary. my literary attainments, this gentleman pro-ceeds to inform the public as to the manner in which my ineng, became known. Of course his statement is correct. He also tells his readers that I am addicted to the questionable habit of attending dances. To this I likewise acquiesce, attending dances. To this I likewise acquiesce, inasmuch as I have attended almost a dozen of such gatherings in my life. He might also have intimated that I have passed by a great many taverns in my time, thus exposing myself to the danger of intoxication through the inhalation of those noxious gases which almost invariably permeate the air in the vicinity of such institutions; for all which carelessness, not-withstanding the fact that withstanding the fact that I have never yet been intoxicated, I deserve unmeasured execution Other remarks equally silly in reference to the signification of my nom de p'ume, etc., are in-dulged in, after which T. A. H. winds up with the suggestion that, as I am postessed, according to him, of considerable poetic fire, and as it seems to be the correct thing for the Freeman staff to haunt "Parmassus' sacred shade." I should not be an exception to the rule. In fact, he declares that I have consented to furpish a nem for next week's Freemar , and that ie as een kindly parmitted to see the MS , which he pronounces in the che-in proof of which asser-tion he quotes one stanza; but as his memory seems to be greatly at fault, I have concluded to publish the poem entire. Here it is: THE GENEOLOGY OF TOM A. HAWK. In Hades there lived a chicken,

The crumbs and offat picking On the fabled fid-liers' green. This same pullet was an exquisite-She could play at mamblepeg-But she lacked the greatest requisite:

She never hid an egg. Se Reelzel ub grew jealous, That this much petted ben Had not been over zenious At his will to say Amen! So he summoned her before him— This eccentric, lazy chiek—

And said, as stern he hore him, You've been playing me a trick. I have fed you and caressed you,

In hopes to be repaid, But the devil has possessed gou-One egg you have not laid. Now hearken to my warning: If an egg to me you do not bring Before to-morrow morning. Your worthless neek I'll wring. Then this hen's heart did beat faster,

And with trembling she did say: To me thy will is law, dear master, Though an egg I cannot lay; But if one you'll deign to furnish, Then may I never scratch, If to your wish Um squirmish, And should refuse to hatch.

This proposal pleased the devil, And an imp he did command, By things both good and evil, To search the sea and land: or at the gate admission beg. The all without was had and rain, Till be found the wished-for egg.

Then Moloch on his errand Soon started with despatch. And of an egg, as warn'd, He tried a glimpse to catch. At length their careful scrutiny His eyes on an egg did fix, While his heart was brooding mutiny

Near the famous river Styx. He grasped it in a twinkling And bore it to his king; Then the sound of cymbals tinkling Made Pandemonium ring.

Old Satan took it bandily And gave it to the cluck, While he muttered, somewhat blandly, Now hatch, you old eunuch ! Soon this chicken took her station,

Where she set from day to day, And she eat a scanty ration Till the shell was chipped away; Then from his narrow prison The wondrous bird came forth, And he shivered as if he d risen In the regions of the North.

He was shaped the most outrageous Of all known human things, And he scared the most courageous And he was a monstrous gawk;

He was feathered like an eagle. And they called him-ToM A. HAWK. But young Tommy soon did learn A very pasty habit, 'ho' his ma was rather stern

And his foster-lather crabbed.
He could scold, and he would lie,
And all h-I was consternation,
For he knocked all things to "pi" By his great exaggeration. Then old Satan did wax wroth, Which put Tom in trepidation.

And he soon began to froth By reason of sheer vexation. So he took him by the lug And thrust him on the world, And now this naughty pug Is writing for the Her'ld,

So now good bye, old Thomas,-Your friendship I disdain: Should you make good your promise, When that you write again, You'll doubtless still abuse, But I would have you know
