[From the San Francisco Chronicle, Aug. 11.] The following story, as reported to us, has much of romance in it, but the future may demonstrate its truth, revolutionize commerce, and make the possessors of the marvellous talisman the veritable Midas of PRESIDENTS OF COLLEGES, MINISTERS, the nineteenth century. It is no less than the discovery of a chemical process, which, when applied to base metals, transmutes them into gold.

Some three months ago a plain-looking man of American birth presented himself at one of our leading banks and deposited a leather valise on the banker's desk, opened and took from it a mass of dingy metal, looking half-like copper and half-like brass, gold if he saw it; and, if not, would he be Principal. kind enough to send for some confidential Person on whose judgment he could rely, to assay and determine the quality and value of his metal. The proposition was acceded to. One of our most prominent assayers was summoued, and after examining the substance and inquiring with visible excitement where it came from, and receiving no satisfaction, departed, taking it with him, promising to report on it next day at noon. Punctually at the appointed time the three men met at the bank. The assayer produced the metal, which had been run into the form of a bar, and had all the appearance of the ordinary gold and ingot of com-

"That looks like gold," said the banker.
"It is gold," said the assayer, "nearly a "It is gold," said the assayer, "nearly a thousand fine-the purest I have ever put in a cracibile.'

The stranger inquired if the banker was

I was at work there during the most of the past winter, and have by degrees succeeded in making myself quite comfortable without attracting atiention. I admit I have experienced CAMPAIGN Thirty new and beautiful desome fear of discovery and attack; but my guards are my dogs, and they are faithful and silent. There is now more danger than ever in the increasing volume of my product which will need other means of transporting raw material and bringing it back in the shape of gold than this old valise and

He then turned to a convenient table and wrote a few lines, which he sealed in an envelope and handed to the banker. "There is the direction to my retreat. I shall return in a week with more gold, and if I fail to come you may know that some evil has befallen me. Then come to me." The banker promised faithful observance of the injunction, and with many protestations of mutual fidelity and good will they parted. The paper has never been opened, and the manufacturer of gold has steadily and punctually re-appeared, bringing his weekly enormous additions to the bullion of the bank. He shows that there was a total celipse of the moon, concomitant with the Market Street, Philadelphia. Try it. earthquake which occurred when Julius Casar was assassinated, on the 15th of March, B. C. 44. He has also calculated the Jewish calendar to A. D. 31, and the result of his researches confirms the facts recorded by the Evangelists of the wonderful physical events that accompanied the crucifixion. His astronomical calculation also shows that on the 6th of April, A. D. 21, there was a total eclipse of the sun, accompanied, in all probability, by the earthquake spoken of by Matthew. This mode of reckoning was verified by another calcalation, made by calculating backwards from the great total eclipse, in April, 1818, which also gives April 6th as the date of the new moon A. D. 31. As the vernal equinox of the year fell on the 25th of on the following new moon, it is clear April 6th was identified with Nisan 14th was on Friday, the day of preparation for DENTISTRY carried on in all its was on Friday, the day of preparation for the Sabbath; and this agrees with the He- BRO., at their DENTAL ROOMS,

GRANT'S CASTLES IN THE AIR.

There is a sound of trouble, And low, sad wails of woe Come steading o'er the stubble, From the folks in "rotten row;" And even Hiram's anguished greans Are heard in wild despair,

As he, in mandlin state, bemoans His castles in the air. "This world is all a fleeting show," Is now their daily song;

They've ruled in clover here below, But won't rule very long; For Ulysses' star declineth, And they find no comfort there-"Gone where the woodbine twineth" Are their eastles in the air.

With anarchy they filled the land. And now the conflict's o'er, They manufacture Ku-Klax bands That they may plunder more;

But Greeley'll set all matters right-The South need not despair, For shoulder-straps will take their flight With eastles in the air.

'Tis sad to see what ravages A little scare will do. As to Chappaqua, for cabbages, Now flock the guilty erew; But naught but stern integrity They'll find reposing there-No Seneca sandstone they'll see,

But 'twill their shallop bear,

Nor eastles in the nir. And, oh! how penitent they'll seem! But 'twill not save their hams; Not worth so many dams. Salt River's bring tide runs deep,

And they may row themselves to sleep With eastles in the air. Now Horace Greeley is the man We to the world proclaim, To free us from corruption's bann-

Restore our tarnished name; His friends by countless thousands move, With thousands more to spare; May all his dreams of greatness prove No castles in the air.

The Widow Rody.

Charles W. Helm, in the course of his speech last Monday, after contrasting the Cincinnati Liberal platform with the Radical platform made at Philadelphia, said he would support Greeley, whom everybody recognized as an honest man, if Grant stood on the same platform with him, and the speaker gave point to his declaration by relating in his inimitable way the following

The Widow Rody, an owner of two white mules and a homestead, lived in Western Missonri. She did all of her house and farm work, and notwithstanding she stood six feet in her moccasins, never wore more than seven yards of calico. When she went to mill with her grist on one of her mules, she never rode on a side-saddle. During the late 'unpleasantness' a noted gnerilla named Jenison raided down on her premises, and when she returned from the spring she found her two mules had taken such a liking to the guerilla as to follow him into his camp. Getting on their track she followed it until warned by bayonets presented to her bosom that she could not see the chief of the gang. Brushing these aside, she made a bee-line for his tent. She soon appeared in his presence, and there was that expression in her eye which said as plainly as words that she was not to be trifled with. Jenison looked up, and being evidently annoyed, asked her business.

She replied, "See here, Jenison, I want my mules." "How do you know I've got your mules?"

said he. "Because I seed 'em under the hill." "Well, old woman, before you can get them you must tell me your politics." "I hain't got no politics, Jenison, and I want my mules.'

and I hain't got no principles; but I can tell you this—I'm agin all stealin'. I want my mules." The speaker added that it was needless to say she got her mules; and that when more than two hundred millions of property belonging to the Southern people could be tracked into carpet-bag camps, protected by the bayonets of Graut, that the Widow Rody declaration—agin all stealin',—was a very proper platform for Southern white meneto stand upon in the present political contest-Warrenton Index.
