

LOVE'S LUNACY. THE NICEST WIDOW IN THE BLUE GRASS REGION. Not far from the Forks at Elkhorn lived the pretty little widow Fauntleroy...

The pretty Mrs. Fauntleroy had been a widow for more than a year, while the General, having a great regard for etiquette, had waited patiently for that time to elapse...

The widow turned and bowed to John, and rode out into the stream, but a little behind her companion. The east bank was very steep, and required the horses to put forth all their strength to reach the top...

John Peyton leaped from his horse, and in an instant caught the floating lady and saddle, and before the General had recovered from his astonishment, was at the top of the bank with his burden.

The General did as he was bid, and soon returned with the horse. In the meantime John Peyton had secured his own horse, and when the General came back with the widow's horse, she and John were laughing merrily over the ridiculous accident.

John Peyton repaired the broken girder, fastened the saddle again on the horse, placed the lady in her seat, bade her good evening, mounted his horse, and taking another road down the Elkhorn, rode rapidly home, leaving the General to escort the widow.

It is not necessary to relate how he entertained his fair companion with pious anecdotes of Mr. Clay and other famous public men; but when he reached the Fauntleroy place, he accepted the lady's invitation to dismount and take tea with her.

After having changed her wet clothing the pretty widow entertained her guest with the brightest smiles and some new songs. The General was delighted, and expressed delight as Kentucky gentlemen of that day would have done.

When he bid her good night and shook hands with her on the porch, the wicked little widow gave his hand a little squeeze—only a little—but it thrilled like an electric shock through his great, ponderous frame.

lost. Powhattan, madam, is rightfully yours. "But General," said she, "I believe the wager is conditional. It was the horse or anything else on the place, was it not?"

The pretty widow blushed to the tips of her fingers when she said, "You have another and superior animal here—your son John; if he would but use his tongue I think I shall choose him."

There was a moment of dead silence, then a laugh, in which the General did not join. He rose, and in his blandest manner bade the ladies good morning. To John he said, "Sir, you will remain."

And that was the way that John Peyton came to marry the pretty widow Fauntleroy. Gen. Peyton never forgave his pretty daughter-in-law her practical joke. In after years he used to say:

"Sir, she is the finest lady in the Blue-grass region, but she lacks taste, sir."

The widow turned and bowed to John, and rode out into the stream, but a little behind her companion. The east bank was very steep, and required the horses to put forth all their strength to reach the top...
