about the work :

THE LIFE OF PRINCE GALLITZIN. - Several days ago we noticed the fact of having received from M. P. Meagher, bookseller and stationer, a book bearing the above title, and written by Miss Sarah M. Brownson, or New York. Since then we have read the work and feel justified in following the thread of her narrative and expressing our opinion of its contents. The life of this wonpen of the historian. The wealthy, educated son of noble parents in Russia; a prince by title, and having by birth and associations everything about him that the world could give him, he suddenly concluded by and with the advice and consent of his parents, to pay a visit to this country. At that time, near the close of the last century, civil dissensions prevailed in nearly every portion of Europe. A set of Godless so-called philosophers were the trusted advisers and intimate friends of which seems to knock the spots off all the several reigning monarchs, and although the the most that was known then was that it had just thrown off the yoke of hated tyranny. and declared her right to be a free and independent nation, was a sore trial to a fond mother's heart, yet she was prepared to make the sacrifice so that she could remove her son from the company of profligates who professed no form of belief beyond the certainty that life was short, and that it should therefore be given up to what the world calls enjoyment. The ways of God are inscrutable. Little did that mother think, as she clasped him to her besom when he was about leaving, that her eyes had rested upon him for the last time on earth, and that the Prince, whose heart was beating high in anticipation of the to him wonderful tour he was about to undertake, would be found a few years later in one of the dreariest wilds of Pennsylvaniabeautiful day and Saturday night had about an humble missionary doing battle in the

The authoress devotes a considerable portion of the opening chapters to a history of the Gallitzin family. From her we learn that the father of the subject of this memoir was a Russian nobleman. He stood high in the favor of the reigning Czar and held many professor of religion, but, on the contrary, his associates were Voltaire and other infidel philosophers. The mother of the Prince is represented to have been of mobile birtha learned, pious and virtuous woman-and it was doubtless owing to her

The mission chosen by the young | night. minister was one that suited a person of his zeal and ardent temperament. For a time he traversed almost the entire southwestern portion of this State, and even attended to he wants of the settlers in a part of West Virginia. About the year 1798, he located permanently at Loretto, and founded that village in an almost impenetrable wild Gathering about him a few settlers, he soon reared an humble chapel, and although his congregation was small, the good priest found plenty of work to do in visiting distant settlements. By becoming a citizen of the United States he incurred the displeasure of the Czar, and his estates in Russia were forfeited to his only sister, with the explicit understanding that no portion of the inheritance should accrue to his benefit. His sister, however, sent him various sums of money, all which he expended in relieving the wants and necessities of the poor and in buying land for those unable to purchase. For forty-two years the humble missionary pursued the calling which he had voluntarly chosen, when at length his health began to fail under the active work required of him, and on the sixth day of May, 1840, two attending priests and a weeping knot of his | for cheapness compare with those of any like parishioners gathered around his bedside to see the Prince and Juissionary pass away. calmly and peacefully he breath and his immortal soul was received by Him for whom he had renounced wealth and worldly distinction to enlist under the ban-

A monument marks his last resting place, but we understand that an effort is being made to have a more appropriate one placed over him.

We have followed the general thread of Miss Brownson's parrative, but our sketch Her history of Prince Demetrius Augustine Gallitzin is written in the finest language; leading incidents in the career of her illustrious subject are faithfully portrayed, and taken altogether one wonders how the talented lady could have the patience to pursue the difficult task of collating all the ma terial contained in this life. If space permitted we would publish in this connec tion a few extracts from the work, that would give the reader an idea of the manner in which the book has been compiled. As an interesting history of a pioneer missionary it is an invaluable contribution to litera century of his life and labors were passed.

should always be dressed in goods cheapest and best, and—but just here let us tarry and conveys but a very faint outline of this work. I invite the attention of our young lady friends and the rest of womankind, as well as mankind, to the fact that M. HEAVEN bless S. J. Hess, who, with his orother, keeps goods so fine in the clothing line, unsurpassed by any other. Their store complete is on Main street, in famous Johnstown borough, where all will find treatment kind and never know a serrow for having bought a bumkum lot of clothing cheap toature, but it is a work of peculiar value to morrow, to-day, or at any other time, for be the people of this county, where nearly half | it known that their store, 241 and 243 Main street, is now filled to repletion with the first invoice of elegant clothing, etc., for the paring trade, that has yet reached that city.

ATTENTION, GENTLEMEN!-Andrew Mos, Merchant Tailor, 104 Clinton street, Johnstown, has just received, and is now prepared to make up in accordance with the atest fashions and in the best style of workmanship, his first invoice of spring and summer goods for gentlemen's and youths' wear. WHEN Dame Nature begins to don her nantle of green, and the other dames and damsels commence thinking about a change of raiment suitable to the genial season now approaching, then will all feminine eyes and many feminine footsteps be turned in the direction of I. T. Coppock's renowned dress goods and dry goods bazaar, 212 Main street, onnstown, which is par excellence the place to buy the choicest goods at the lowest prices.

Some people may talk about the big stock ing Doeds, &c., were left for record at the of flour, feed and graceries they keep; and Recorder Singer's office from the 1st to the others may try to induce persons to buy by others may try to induce persons to buy by declaring they sell very cheap. Yet this bear in mind, nowhere will you flud, though you seek o'er and o'er, better flour and feed, and other things that you need, than at E.J. Mills' cheap store. Try his choice teas.

> THE RIGHT WAY .- The way to get rich is to spend less money than you earn, and the proper way to do this is to buy where you can buy the cheapest, and buy only what on need. Myers & Lloyd's great mercantile mart offers the best inducements to eash purchasers in this region. Goods very cheap, very select, and very abundant.
