NUMBER 16.

JOKE FROM MAX ADELER.

The following joke, from the pen of our "old" friend Max, we take from the Philadelphia Sunday Dispatch :

Kipp always had an idea that he could invent a self-acting sewing machine; and he did. He procured a steel ribbon spring about twenty feet long, and of sufficient power to run a horse car. This herigged on his wife's sewing machine with a lot of clockwork, and it appeared to him when he finished the job that evening, that he had realized his hopes. If any sewing machine ever would go, that would ; so he wound it up ready for use in the morning and went to hed. At 4 o'elock Mrs. Kipp aroused him and told him to listen to the burglars in the house. He listened and heard a most terrific racket over in the sitting room. It appeared to him that there must be a million or more burglars refreshing themselves with a prize fight. So he loaded his gun, crept softly over, and peeped through a crack in the door. It was not burglars; it was Mrs. Kipp's sewing machine. The peghad slipped, and that spring was having full play. It would rear the unchine up on one end, and charge it three or four times, like a battering ram, against the glass front of the bookcase. Then it would wheel around and suddenly tear across the room and butt ferociously against the mantelpicce; and it would lie down and roll over the floor, and hammer the sofa, and boost the centre table, and try to jam a hole through the wall, and endeavor to leap upon the chandelier. And as Kipp entered the room it fiew at him, and tore in and out between his legs, the wheel revolving like fury all the time, and the spring gradually unwinding. And then Kipp retreated and then waked the family, and got the mattress off the bed .-it out of the window into t where Kipp piled boxes and ash bar rels and slop buckets and fence pail ings on it to hold it still. But all night, under the heap, it kept up a continual buzz and snort and hum, so that the next door neighbor fired at it sixteen times with the impression that it was cats. Kipp has since bought a new sewing machine, and his wife runs it with her fect. He has abandoned the study of mechanics for the present.
