WITNESSED AND UNDETECTED MYSTERIES --STAGE-STRUCK GIRLS-HOW THE BAL-LET IS REINFORCED-A SCENE AT THE DESTRUCTION OF MARKET NUISANCES-THE BROOKLYN TRUST STEAL. [From Our Special Correspondent.]

NEW YORK, July 29, 1873. SECRET CRIMES .-

As two men were rowing in East River, off Twenty-eighth street, the other evening, a large steamer stirred up the waters and revealed the body of a woman, which the two men secured. The body of a boy about eight years of age was tied to the woman's right foot, while around her left arm was a rope the end of which held pieces of flesh, indicating that still another body had been fastened to her. The woman's remains showed the marks of a dreadful struggle. A woman in the crowd which gathered on the wharf claimed to recognize the dead as one whom she had seen sitting on the whatf near where the body was picked up, and nothing more seems to be known of the horrible mystery. This case naturally suggests the many crimes which go unwitnessed and often undetected in this great city. The body of the woman was held down by a weight of stones, and nothing but the mighty churning of the wheels of a great steamer could have raised it to the surface. The tying of the two dead bodies together and the preparation of the weight shows a great deal of deliberation. There was a That official preferred to let the fruit tree terrible struggle, for the woman's face man do the whistling, and accordingly congreat deal of deliberation. There was a shows that, and yet no outery testified to, and the deliberate preparations to conceal and unannoyed, he might pursue that meththe murder, and the throwing of the bodies from the wharf, all unwitnessed. It is full of terrible suggestions of the secret crimes of the metropolis.

HOW THE BALGET IS REINFORCED.

A remarkable scene in many respects was morning. In response to a short advertisement in one of the morning papers, over three hundred girls, none of whom "had ever appeared on any stage," applied for ositions in the dancing and extra ballet for the forthcoming "Black Crook." It was a study for a philosopher to observe what a "motley crew" of the softer sex assembled. They did not seem to be confined to the lower classes, as might be reasonably supposed, but many of the applicants seemed to come from the medium strata of society. They were all neatly and prettily dressed, and from the assembled multitude the management selected a hundred and fifty of the most attractive, personally, and we shall have a chance to see them about August 18th.

CAREOLLTOWN, July 29, 1873. DEAR FREEMAN-The son of Mr. John ot Charles, as your types had it last week,) Flick, whem I noticed as having been kick ed and daugerously injured by a horse, is still living, but ery sipelas having set in, as was feared by the attending physicians, his case is now beyond hope-at least all reasonable hope.

The fresco painters are now at work beautifying the interior of St. Benedict's church. This was a much needed improvement and will add greatly to the appearance of the edffice when completed.

A young man who recently arrived in our place as agent for the sale of shrubbery, etc., was invited a few days ago by the Burgess, or rather by the President of Council, to contribute fifty cents and costs to the finances of the bayough, which invitation he rather sitatingly nocepted, remarking, however, that "the paltry fifty cents was a trifle compared to a man's right and will to ride as he leased." On Saturday last the same gen-eman was again called upon to answer the charge of recklessly galloping through our borough, and this time he boldly confessed the "soft impeachment," no doubt anticipating another "paltry fifty cent fine," but in this second venture he was considerably nonplussed when the same autority gave him to understand that in view of this being his second offence, etc., five dollars and costs to a like amount would probably be sufficient to reimburse the borough treasury for, his reckless pastime. This amount he failed to have under his immediate control, and told the Burgess that he might "whistle for it." signed him to the lock-up, where, unmolested od of rendering an equivalent for the tine imposed. After a few heurs' deep and calm deliberation, he considered it full time to reconsider his first consideration, and accordingly furnished the requisite consideration through the courtesy of a considerate friend, and was considerably relieved to find himwitnessed at Niblo's Theatre on Friday | self once again in an atmosphere more congenial for vegetation. He says it is fruitless to attempt to evade the laws of this borough. and that honceforth he will make haste more slowly within the corporate limits.

THE WORKINGS OF THE BANKRUPT LAW -A Case in Point .- Not only because of the information contained in the following article from the Philadelphia Ledger, but because the gentleman whose case is cited to "point a moral and adorn a tale" is well known in this part of the country, having long traveled it as a notion pedlar and wool buyer, we transfer the Item in full to our

in the United States Court, is one proof of the efficiency of our bankruptcy laws. Here was a man who, after a tolerably fair start in business, seems to have determined to break with all the laws that govern society. The jury had found that he had concealed his property, or rather that of his partners and creditors, and wasted their money in an effort to get a divorce. It is no small satisfaction to merchants to know that the immunity to honest debtors does not apply to the case of a man who wilfully and fraudulently conceals his assets, and leaves to them His daughter, Sarah, who preferred the ticman and a family in luxury, and I give objects, might command a high degree of them fast horses and carriages with which success. For nearly two years he has preimprisonment in our county prison and a in the same court, but the very frequency of such proceedings shows that the United States bankrupt laws, fairly administered, enable honest debtors to get a discharge, and prevent dishonest men from trying to defeat the law and justice.

LOVE'S YOUNG DREAM MIPPED IN THE lees of such machines. BUD .- Hope deferred, it is said, maketh the the undersigned. far from Altgona in a bad state of repair, These hearts belong respectively to a young man and woman. The twain owning these hearts shook the dust of the rural village from off their sandals a few days ago and went to Pittsburgh to get married. No preacher in that city could be found willing to consent to weave the silken tie. They then visited in succession, and for the same purpose, Greensburg, Johnstown, Loretto, Altoona, and Tyrone. It is possible that whereever they went-they could not get married, and were therefore obliged perforce o go back whence they came with no visions oming np before them of love in a cottage and a baby jumper in the spare-room. Both the parties are represented to be earnest, virtuous, and highly respectable. But the parents of the party of the first part, it seems, looked upon the contemplated union with comage or extreme exercision, and it is due to their energetic action, made manifest through the medium of a third party, that no matrimonial alliance was effected. This third party visited all the parsons at all the places mentioned and absolutely forbade the banns and the parsons respected his demand. Everybody and everything is not happy in that, rural village just now .- Altoona Tribung.

THE MAN in the moon was looking at the made-up clothing of James J. Murphy, 109 Clinton street, Johnstown, the other night, with the evident intention of making a purchase. He can't shine without a new suit from Murphy, neither can the young men of Cambria county shine unless they go and do likewise. Murphy is the cheapest and cleycrest man to buy from you ever read about.
