He immediately entered upon the mission at Latrobe, Pa., then but a miserable log hut. His mission ex-tended over a territory of fifty miles, and he frequently had the pleasure of coming in contact with his co-laborer and bosom friend, Prince Father Gallitzin, then on the mountain. At the approach of the Benedictine Fathers, in Westmoreland county, Rev. Stillinger settled in Blairsville, about the year a log house, on the very spot where his grave is now being moulded-the place selected by himself, years ago, as his final resting place. THE Pittsburgh Commercial in its report of the speeches made at the banquet given on Friday night last in honor of the that his injury was the result of his own grand rennion of the Army of the Cumberland, which was held in that city last week, thus alludes to the speech of our townsman, Rev. R. C. Christy, in response to the toast, the "Army of the Cumberland":

The reverend gentleman said there was no necessity to introduce his subject to such an audience. It had been his good fortune to be present at the beginning of the Army of the Cumberland, when, on the banks of the Monongahela, the gallant Negley took command of his Pennsylvania soldiers, and started them for Louisville. Father Christy referred with particularity to the battle f Stone River, about which he said there had been some errors. in running the ore crusher. Among others it was his duty to ascend to the upper portion of the mill each morning previous to commencing work and grease the gearing by which the shears are run. This duty he occasionally neglected, and it is stated that on such occasions he would go above and do his work while the machinery was moving, notwithstanding that he had been repeat-Monday morning he attempted to perform he was drawn into the fatal embrace of the terrible machinery. One of his arms was terribly lacerated and torn from the socket, dropping to the mill floor below. Both of his legs were crushed and a severe wound inflicted across his abdomen. At this writing, immediately after the accident, young Barr is still alive, but his death cannot be long delayed. The victim of this terrible efficient secretary of the diocese, master of accident is probably seventeen years of age, and has lived in this neighborhood all his life. His fate should be an impressive warning to those whose duty brings them in contact with dangerous mechinery. If the facts in the case be as stated to us, it seems clear want of forethought. We trust we may never have a similar case to record. Since the above was in type we have interviewed Dr. Smith, who gives us the following information in regard to Barr's injuries: The right arm was not forn from the socket, but was wrenched off some little dis-tance above the elbow; the left leg was broken in six or eight places below the knee, and is in fact reduced to a jelly; the right leg was fractured at the thigh in two places, and the spine was somewhat injured. The right arm was amputate near the shoulder joint on Monday forenoon. The left leg will pecessarily be amputated above the The patient is in a very precarious condition, and, while he may recover, the chances are decidedly against him .- Holli-
