An Aboriginal Irishman. A writer of "English Sketches" in the Catholic World for November tells a curious anecdote, which was related to him many years ago by a priest to whom it occurred. This priest went on a mission to America, and for some years his labors lay in the wild regions of the far West. The missionary led pretty much the life of the children of the virgin forests that he the white man was never seen. He rode for miles and miles through the wilderness, feeding, like the anchorites, on what he could gather by the way, and sleeping in the branches of some thick foliaged tree, to the trunk of which he tied his horse; and at daybreak he was off on his rambles again. One morning, as he was riding thro' a wood in search of food, he descried a little wreath of smoke curling above the trees. He made for the spot, thinking he had come on a field of labor in the shape of a little colony to be baptized; but, on approaching, he found only a single wigwam, at the door of which a wild woman was squatting with a brood of small children about her. The good father was exhausted with hunger, and managed, by signs and a few words of the Indian dialect, to convey this fact to the woman. She rose at once, and placed before him her frugal store. While he was doing justice to it, the lord of the wigwam returned, and great was his amazement to behold the guest whom his lady was hospitably ministering to. The priest was trying to air his small store of words, when his host, who was attired in the scanty costume of his tribe, with a plentiful crop of feathers spronting from his head-gear, after surveying him silently for a moment, exclaimed, "Your reverence is a Catholic priest, I'll be bound, and an Irishman into the bargain!" His listener nearly capsized with astonishment. But it was neither a vision nor a delusion. The wild Indian was himself an Irishman, who, with two older companions, had come to those remote forests many years before in search of fortune in some form or other; the trio had been captured by the Indians, who put two of them to death, and only spared the youngest on account of his expertness with the bow and arrow and other kin- Pure Spices, &c. dred accomplishments which made him useful to the tribe. He learned in time to speak their language and adopt their mode of life, even to the extent of marrying a wild woman of their race. But the faith of his childhood survived amongst the vicissitudes of this strange career. He welcomed the priest with joy and the reverence of a genuine Irish heart; and before the missionary left his wigwam. he received the wife into the church, married the pair, baptized and instructed the children, and administered the sacraments to the father. Then he Near Union School House, Ebensburg, sallied forth once more on his life of danger and self-sacrifice, which, though it afforded many consoling and romantie episodes, never furnished such another as this. "Now," exclaimed Canon R-, triumphantly, "just tell me if such an adventure as that could happen to any two men under the sun ex-

You cannot make a success of yourself without hard work, any more than you can put up a stove without wishing that swearing was not sinful.

A friend of mine hit upon an ingenious expedient to suppress his neighbor's dog, which made a business of howling and barking when honest people wanted to sleep. He buried a dozen very small fish-hooks in a piece of raw beef, tied a string to the tempting morsel, and lowered it down the partition fence into the yard. During the night that dog lost his voice, and his owner lost his dog.
