-A farmer named Goughnour left his span of horses unhitched at Summerhill one day last week while he went into a store to attend to some business, and the next thing he saw of them they were getting over ground with the wagon to which they were attached in the direction of the railroad track, which they reached just in time to enable a passing train to collide with the wagon and knock the greater portion of it into smithereens, besides scattering the grain it contained to the four winds of heaven. The horses then made off with the balance of the wagon, but failed to take it and the greater portion of the gears home with them. In fact one of the horses did not reach home until the following morning, but fortunately neither of them were injured.

It is the wildest kind of talk to say that | constitution, I will subside for the present religious education is to be confined to the pulpit, the Sabbath school and the fireside. Any man reading the Bible will see that religion is not an affair that can be or ought to be separated from any action or period of our lives. Religion is not a mere Sunday matter, or a purely domestic virtue. Religion should penetrate our whole being-it should vitalize and energize the whole soul -it should be the spring of all our actions, influence all our thoughts, and regulate our every word. One of the greatest educators of man says; "All whatsoever you do in word or in work, all things do ye in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ," and "whether you eat or drink, or whatsoever else you do; do all to the giory of God." If, then, religion should be the master principle, the ruling element in our lives, assuredly ought it be most insisted on when the mind is freshest and most open to its hallowed influence. Religion's influence ought to encircle the child, ought to envelope it and penetrate its every hidden recess of heart; it ought to be the most prominent feature in the school, ought to be exercised not merely by a formul so that the child would live beneath its atmosphere, and become every hour more and more saturated with it. Now here "Ebensburg" falls into a blunder as widespread as t is erroneous.
