A correspondent furnishes the following additional incident to the Sun: I have read the story of Ullman's educated dog, and can vouch for its truth; but his most remarkable performances are not even referred to in your article. Standing one day upon the platform at the depot I noticed that a passenger train had stopped, and that the engineer had temporally left the engine. At this time the dog Knapp was standing near, and it was apparent from his restlessness that he was not at all pleased to see the locomotive thus left alone. As he was silently contemplating the scene and wondering in his own mind what course it would be advisable for him to pursue under the circumstances, another train came thundering up to the depot and ran into the rear of the one that had been left standing without an engineer.— Fortunately the force of the collision was not great, but the jar was sufficient to open the throttle of the driverless locomotive, which immediately commenced moving off at a rapid rate. Knapp took in the situation at a glance. His time to act had come, and, like a flash, he sprang for one of the passing cars, catching the rear platform of the last one as it rushed by im. From here I saw him clambering to the top of the car and dashing wildl for the locomotive, which he soon reached when, seizing the throttle in his teeth, he instantly reversed the engine, stopped the flying train, and brought it safely back to the depot. Once here, however, he would not permit the engineer to take his place. and could not be induced to leave the engine until a new driver had been placed in charge. Think what a terrible catastrophe was probably averted by the wonderful intelligence and coolness of that dog!

-It wasn't exactly handsome of the ESFIB: 18559 Chicago rector to dismiss a couple he had white while the inhalf-married because the lady had been divorced. He left them in a dilemma .--The man was married to the woman, but the woman was not married to the man at all. Such obstructions in the way of matrimony are exceedingly inconvenient. At the latest advices the married man and di-

-It isn't every man who is lucky enough to have the editor of a newspaper for a wife. Mr. Lewis Walker, of Iola, Kansas, enjoys the sweet boon. Appreciating his modesty, she waited for his temporary abmost touching editorial setting forth his honesty, integrity, genius, learning, incorruptibility and special capacity for public affairs. How Mr. Lewis Walker took this sort of thing when he got home we are not informed. -We trust that the Rev. Mr. Revnolds of Muhlenburg county, Ky., will now give up preaching. His views of the paternal relation are peculiar. He has a young and beautiful daughter and wanted her to marry a young and rich man. She declined. The Rev. Mr. Reynolds flogged her until she consented, but upon the evening fixed for the unptials she wrote to a gentleman ted for her; so that one of the occupations of the Rev. Mr. Reynolds is gone.

-A woman named Brink, while board ig at a house in Port Jervis, N. Y., gave birth to a child. When she came to leave the house she could not pay her board, and the child was kept as security. The mother went to get her baby several times, but was not allowed to have it until she paid her board. She finally stated her case to ed to divest the character of Jesus of officer Eurton, who went and demanded of all its clothing, and told the officer to icing mother.

-In Harrisburg, on Saturday afternoon, a colored man name I David Davis, familiarly known by the name of "Black Davy," attempted to cross the railroad in front of an approaching train of cars and was caught by the cow-catcher and instantly most sickening appearance. His body tricated.

-A dispatch from Cunningham, Charlton county, Mo., says a boiler in the saw mill river exploded on Saturday morning, killing Elisha Smith, engineer, Richard Worand badly wounded Wm. Simpson. Smith off, his body rent open, and his brains -Nearly 2,000 coke ovens in the vicini- scattered over the ground. Worthington hands cut off by pieces of the boiler, and was carried afty feet from the mill. The cause of the explosion is unknown.
