The Law of Accumulation.

Everybody knows that money makes money, but it is not everybody that pays attention to the modus operandi by which this is brought about and the practical consequences which for-

Schoolboys are taught the rule of compound interest, but nine out of ton of them forget all about it for the re- Having purchased largely for cash, and many ciple has more to do with the accumulation of large fortunes than any other cause whatever; and it has bearings on the increase of wealth and on the ratio and style of expenditure. both personal and national, of which rated.

We read in a paper a few mouths ago of the death of an eminent London capitalist, who left the enormous fortune of three millions sterling .-This old gentleman was over ninety years of age at the time of his death, and it is pretty evident that he was a man of quiet habits and moderate expenditure, letting his capital accumulate fr m year to year by its own no ural force. Now, it is only when it has been in operation for along series of consecut' e years that we ree what the force of compound laterest is .-For the first few years the augmentation is almost imperceptible, but when o ce the power of inc case las been . developed, it go son at an augmenting r. ti), until the realts are almost ineredible. There can be no doubt that in the case just mentioned, the wealth accumulated after the natural duramore than all the seventy years preper cent. and the interest reinvested at the same rate, it will double itself in five years. Allow ten years for this to take place, owing to loss of time in reinvesting, and we reach the remarkable conclusion-remarka ble, we mean, to those who have never yet thought about it-that if a man can lay by a thousand dollars at one and twenty and let it accumulate at compound interest, it will amount to the enormous sum of thirty thousand dollars, if he lives to the age of seventy, to sixty thousand at eighty, and to a hundred and twenty thousand at ninety. This is the secret of the large fortunes of the great bankers and capitalists of Europe, whose money goes on accumulating from generation, to generation, and augments with prodigious rapidity after thirty or fifty years have passed

The process, however, may be re- HARDWARE, ALL KIND! versed. A man wastes or spends a such as Locks, Screws, Butt Hinges, Shutter than any other polish. Table Hinges, Polite Learned Notice that the younger a man is the more valuble money is to him. We have seen what a thousand dollars is to a man seen what a thousand dollars is to a man Harness and Saddlery Ware fortune; but a thousand dollars to a man of fifty would be of comparatively small account.

Suppose a man begins life with economical habits, and by rigid self-denial accumulates five hundred pounds by the time he is twenty-five. That sum will amount to a competency by the time he desires to be free from the cares of business, and he can then, and indeed for years before, have the pleasure of laying out his money freely and without fear, in gratifying his taste or in doing good.

But if he is inclined to gratify his tastes when young, to buy, we will say, expensive furniture, or to mingle freely in society, so that he never saves at all until he is five and torty, what good will five hundred pounds do him then? It is, of course, good in itself, but as the foundation of a competency it is utterly in adequate. It would only amount to two thousand pounds at sixty-five, and not to a competency till long after three score and ten.

The points of the whole matter are therefore this: Every dollar saved in youth is thirty dollars in old age; every hundred dollars spent in foolery or finery before five and twenty is simply three thousand dollars thrown away of provision for the time when work must be a burden.

Let our young men in business think of this. They are exposed, on entering life, to innumerable temptations to spend. Let such be steadly resisted. The course in youth is quick saving and careful economy. By and by a time will come when this will bear its legitimate fruits. Then is the time for open handed freedom in expendi- " ture, when the judgment is matured, when the knowledge of the world is acquired, and when capital has been accumulated to such an extent that e en if there is no more saving, there need be no further anxiety .- Merchants and Manufacturers' Review.

JOHN D. THOMAS,

AN OPERA TROUPE OF PARROTS .--An extraordinary public entertainment has been produced in Lima, Peru, by an Italian named Contarini, who proposes to earry his exhibition to Europe. He has taught and trained, by dint of great patience and perseverance, an opera company, made up of thirty parrets and paroquets, who perform two of Bellini's operas, Norma Look at the Prices. and Sonnambura, on a miniature stage, with full chorus, and recitative. The and Sonnambula, on a miniature stage. director and manager accompanies the artists on a piano harmonium, and the perfection with which each bird sings his part and the excellence of the chorus is prodigious. The debut of this lyrico-orni hological company in Norma was attended by the wealth and fashion of Lima. When the paroquet that sang the contralto finished the allegro in the "Salutation to the Navy Blue, New Green, New Brown, Moon," such was the enthusiasm, the shouting and the applause at hearing a bird sing the "Casta Diva," that the bird company, affrighted, took flight and sought refuge among the side scenes. This interrupted the performance for nearly a quarter of an hour. and Signor Contarina had to tranquilize the "artists" by giving them bread soaked in wine. Thenceforth the expressions and approbation were moderated, in order not to spoil the play. It appears that the bird artists have now become accustomed to the applause. The correctness and propriety with which they give certain parts of the opera are wonderful. The primo tenore possesses all the graces of the school of Mario, and the ladies of Lima have named the prima donna

The piece selected was that which so vividly calls attention to the boy who stood on the burning deck, which, considering the temperature of this season, is full of comforting passages. His fervid oratory and graceful gestures, as he stood there alone, up to his knees in snow, made one of the most precious events in our his-
