From Trade to Title.

When Fraucois Hardonin, the son of a poor watchmaker at Caen, in France, turned bis youthful back upon the workshop of his father and enlisted in a Hussar regiment, he certainly had no extravagant dreams future fortune or renown. Rejuicing in a peculiarly amiable disposition and a propottionate inclination to sociability, he disliked its monotony and comparative scelasion, and chose the arms because the latter seemed the only available means of variety and extended association for a tradesman's son. That was many years ago. Not long after his enlistment the Hussars were ordered to Italy; where they were quartered in the courts of the venerable Palazzo Altemps at Rome: and there the sunny disposition and easy adaptability of the young soldier gained for him the responsible office of quartermaster to the detachment. Nor was professional advancement destined to be the limitation of his good fortune in the Eternal City.

During the years of French occupation the troops were, of course, popular with the aristocracy; officers of all grades had the entry of the best houses; and thus Quarterto the Duchess di Gailese, a wealthy noblewoman with an infant son, who lived in widowed state in the old palace of Altemps. When, in the course of social events, the popular Hussar became an occasional invited was so pleased with him that her partiality soon betrayed itself in a manner rather embarrassing to its chivalrous subject. Not long, however, was the worthy young trooper fated to be in doubt as to what the highfor when he evinced a disposition to call less frequently than before the Duchess frankly told him that he had gained her heart, and tould have her hand for the asking. Here, indeed, was a romantic surprise of fortune for the humble watchmaker's son, though he was too honorable to accept it until satisfied that it resulted from no mere whim of a sentimental woman's momentary fancy. The widow assured him that she was her own mistress, with no relatives to dispute her will in such a matter, and that her feeling towards him was as deep as it had been should be a devoted repayment of the immeasurable honor she had done him, and they were married.

Thus beginning an aristocratic career, the fortunate Hardonin yet preserved his old, fully the epaulets of a sub-lieutenant, which his General conferred upon him as a wedding gift; and did not finally withdraw from his regiment until the death of his wife's son by her first husband left the title of Duke di Gallese to be conferred upon him- Store on South Side of Main Street, self by the Peps. As a prince of the Roman nobility he could scarcely retain his subaltern rank in a foreign army, and as an Italian nobleman, only, he was thenceforth to be known.

Harmonious and honorable in every respect, the marriage was yet fated to have an early conclusion in the death of the eccentric but excellent Duchess. She survived her little son scarcely more than a year, and left to her sincerely mourning hashand her whole | Pure Spices, &c. fortune. For three years the Dake rendered lonely tribute to her memory, and then took a second wife in the i erson of a beautiful young Roman girl, a tiece of the Princess Giustiniani-Bandini, who is also Lady Newberry of the English peerage. This union. too, proved most felicitous, and, with several scions, remains undissolved to the pres-

Such is the romantic history of one of the richest and most popular noblemen of modern Rome; a man whose rare fortune in life may be attributed more to a peculiar genial magnetism of natural social character than to his possession of any transcendant abilities. But not all titled patricians can show so fair a patent.

a picusant parior amusement is afforded by a knowledge of palmistry, and young people may find food for mirth in the examination of the hand for signs of character. It is absurd to judge any one by these signs. but the process is pleasing. Some of the rules are as follows: If the palm of the hand is long, and the fingers well proportioned, not soft, but rather hard, it denotes the person to be ingenuous, changeable, and given to theft and vice. If the hands are hollow, solid and well knit in the joints, it predicts long life. Observe the finger of Mercury-that is, the little finger; if the end of it exceeds the joint of the third finger, such a man will rule his house, and his wife will be pleasing and obedient to him; but if it be short, and does not reach the joint, he will have a shrew for a partner, Blankets ... and she will rule her husband. Oblique nails signify deceit and want of courage. Little, round TIV nails denote obstinacy, anger and batred. If they are crooked at the extremity they show pride and fierceness. Round nails show a choleric person, yet reconciled; honesty, a lover of secret silence. Fleshy nails denote the person to be mild in temper, idle and lazy. Pale and black nails signify the person to be deceitful to his neighbor, and subject to many disenses. Red and marked pails signify cholerie and martial nature, and as many little marks as there are speak so many evil desires.

THE IMPATIENT HEN.

This is the tale of a queer old hen That sat on eggs exactly ten. She made her nest with pride and care, And weather foul or weather fair, You always found her at her post, For patience was her daily boast. Alasl how oft it is our lot To brag of what we haven't got!
This will apply to hens, and men,
And boys and girls.

Days passed, and when The sun began to warmer grow, The grass and leaves began to show Their twinkling green on hill and vale; When sweet and pleasant was the gale, This queer old hen began to long join once more the noisy throng Of idle gossips—half a score— That strutted by the old barn door. "Oh, dear! O, dear! here I am tied! A weary lot is mine," she sighed. No gleam of pleasure do I catch; Why don't these tiresome chickens hatch It worries me in heart and legs

O, chicks, chicks, chicks, why don't you Your little houses white and warm, I've sheltered from the angry storm. "There's Mother Dominique, next door, Her darlings number twenty-four, And they've been out a week or more; And now she wanders at her ease, As proud and happy as you please. So stir your pinky, little pegs, My yellow bills come out and walk,

To sit so long upon these eggs,

1'm sick of pining here at home;

Or else I'll doubt my eggs are eggs, And think they are but lumps of chalk. Then something rash and sad befel: This old hen picked each brittle shell, And not so wonderful to tell, Her treatment, which was very rude, Killed on the spot her tiny brood! And now, despised by fowls and men, She lives a brok n hearted hen.

This is the moral of my lay-To reap success in work or play, Why spoil whatever you've begun Through eagerness to have it done? Remember poor Dame Partlet's fate? Dou't be impatient-learn to wait.

The Siamese Twins.

SOLV KNOTTY PROBLEMS FOR THE LAWYERS It was a very fortunate thing that the Siamese twins were law abiding citizens. Had they not been they would have given the authorities no end of trouble. In fact, it seems to us that they could have committed all sorts of crime with impunity, had they been so inclined. If Chang had committed an assault, how would it have been possible to have arrested him without arresting Eng also; and had Eng be a entirely innocent of all participation in the affair, why should be have been arrested? In order to punish the guilty, it would have been necessary to punish the innocent also; and locking up Chang would have included locking 2p Eng. We do not see any way out of the dilemma that would have arisen except a temporary one, and that is the confining of Englas a witness. But when it came to punishing the guilty party, justice would have been nonplussed. for the law does not permit an innocent party to suffer for crimes he has not committed. a murder, he could never have been hanged, no matter how strong and conclusive the evidence had been against him. He could not have been imprisoned for life, for in these instances it would have no essitated the death or the life-long imprisonment of the unoffending Chang, who, having a separate identity, could have obtained a writ of habcas corpus, and demanded his liberty. Had one of these twins been a rogue, he would have, therefore, caused no end of trouble to the officers of justice. If Chang were drunk and disorderly in the streets, what policeman could have arrested him without laying himself open to a charge of false imprisonment from the unoffending Eng? Had these twins been evil-minded, and conscious of the perplexities they could have originated, there is no knowing what might have happened. The law would have been powerless, for vice most have triumphed and virtue been oppressed, or virtue triumphed and vice gone Human Misery. uppanished. Twins of this description are Just Published, in a Sealed Envelope. Price 6 cts. by no means desirable under such possible contingencies.

The Centennial Report.

A report has been agreed upon by the Executive Committee of the Centennial Commission, which has been sent to Gen. Hawley, President of the Commission, now in Washington. It begins with the report tain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

This Lecture will prove a boon to thousands* and then gives an account of the work which has been done since, namely, the change of organization, making the Hon. Alfred T. Goshorn, of Obio, the executive head, with the title of Director-General; the organization of a foreign department, presided over by Henry D. J. Pratt, formerly in the State Department at Washington, whose duty it is to open communication with foreign exhibitors; and the appointment of Henry Pettit, of the engineering service of the Pennsylvania Ruilroad, to take charge of the engineering department. The plans for ry, ask for OLENA; and if you the main pavilion or exhibition building by Vaux & Radford, of New York, together with those for the memorial building to be constructed by the city and State, by Collins & Autenreith, of Philadelphia, were also reported. A full account of the work done in the office since the last report is given, and in conclusion the report urges on Congress the necessity of taking immediate action on the measures that are intended to further the interests of the commission.

The committee also passed resolutions in the nature of a memorial to the President of the United States, in which they say that everything that has been done has been effectually done, and they consider themselves now in advance, so far as preparation is concerned, of any exhibition that has ever been held. They conclude by saying that if Congress comes to their assistance immediately there will be no difficulty in making the Exhibition all that is promised by its most sanguine friends.
